Union Bars U. S. Steel's Contributory Welfare Plan

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Negotiations between the CIO Steel Workers and U. S. Steel were deadlocked yesterday over a principle.

The Nation's No. 1 steel producer offered to pay 10 cents an hour into a welfare fund for its employes, but only if the workers also made a contribution to the program.

The million-member union rejected the offer and reasserted its intention to strike against U. S. Steel—and any other company—which refuses to agree to a 10-cent-an-hour social-insurance-pension program financed entirely by employers.

The walkout—scheduled for 12:01 a. m. Saturday—would stop work for some 500,000 workers in about 45 steel companies.

Top Conciliators Sent

Hardly was the new stalemate disclosed in Pittsburgh when Federal Mediation Director Cyrus S. Ching announced here the Government was reentering the negotiations in another effort to find a solution to the dispute.

Ching said he would send top conciliators to the union's collective bargaining sessions being conducted with the steel companies at the request of President Truman. Ching assigned his two ace conciliators, William N. Margolis, assistant director, and Peter Seitz, general counsel, to the negotiations.

In turning down U. S. Steel's 10-cent, welfare package, Steel Workers' President Murray charged the gigantic steel company was "deliberately seeking to force" a strike by refusing to accept the principle—recommended recently by the President's fact-finding board—that employes should not have to contribute to the industry's welfare program.

Talks Opened Friday

The pattern-setting negotiations of the Steel Workers and United States Steel have been under way since last Friday, at the request of President Truman. At the Chief Executive's behest, the union had for a third time moved up its strike deadline to permit direct collective bargaining on the basis of the fact-finders' recommendation.

The three-man fact-finding panel recommended the union withdraw its demand for a wage increase of 12½ cents an hour; and that, on the other hand, the companies assume the total cost of a 10-cent-an-hour welfare program—4 cents for social insurance and 6 cents for pensions.

Murray and the Steel Workers accepted the recommendations at once and have insisted the steel companies do likewise. The com-

Tokyo Rose Jury Still Deadlocked

San Francisco, Sept. 28 (U.P.).—The jurors arguing the fate of Mrs. Iva Toguri (Tokyo Rose) D'Aquino on treason charges failed to reach a verdict tonight in their third day of deliberations and were ordered locked up again in their hotel rooms until 9 a. m. Thursday.

Ford and Union In Agreement

Detroit, (Thursday), Sept. 29 (AP). — The CIO United Auto Workers' contract with the Ford Motor Co. expired at 12:01 a. m. (EST) today but weary negotiators still worked to frame a new one. The company said there was agreement on "general principles."

The company said in a brief statement that the delay was "due to trying to agree to language of the contract."

Nats Win on Parnell's Wild Pitch

Scarborough Drops Boston Back Into Tie for Lead, 2 to 1

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Into the same dirt where the Red Sox had been rubbing the Nats' noses all season, Mel Parnell uncorked a ghastly wild pitch at Griffith Stadium last night and the Boston club blew undisputed possession of the league lead.

Behind Ray Scarborough, the last-place Nats, the supposed lambs, upset Red Sox, 2-1, with a two-run surge in the ninth at a point when the Boston athletes were prepared to adjourn to their dressing room mirrors and admire their twelfth straight victory.

Scarborough

Parnell's errant heave that sent the winning run across the plate and sent the Red Sox backsliding into a first-place tie with the Yankees, also halted Boston's 14 straight wins over the Nats.

Nats were on first and third, the score tied at 1-1, when Parnell moved into the game with one out in the ninth. Here the Red Sox plainly were shooting the works in an attempt to match the Yankees' victory of earlier in the day, because just before Parnell's appearance Manager Joe McCarthy had wheeled in his other ace, Ellis Kinder, for a one-pitch relief stint.

Pinch-hitter Buddy Lewis was at the plate when it happened—that horrendous heave from a Boston viewpoint. Out of Parnell's left fist came an incredibly wild pitch that hit the dirt 10 feet in front of the plate and far wide. The frantic Birdie Tebbetts could barely deflect the ball, as Al Kozar came streaking home from third base.

That did it—for Ray Scarbor-

Tuck Declares Coal Walkout Emergency

Richmond, Va., Sept. 28 (U.P.).—Gov. William M. Tuck today declared a state of emergency in Virginia because of the Nation-wide coal walkout, and put the State in the coal mining business to "keep Virginia warm."

Tuck issued an executive order saying the stoppage of mining operations has brought about a state of grave national peril and a serious threat to the proper function of the State government, its hospitals, schools and other agencies.

The order directed the Governor's three-man fuel commission, set up in 1946 to cope with an earlier coal crisis, to obtain control of and produce every possible pound of coal for the use of the State and its citizens.

State to Provide Men

The fuel commission, sometimes called the State Council of Defense, was empowered to acquire by contract, lease, purchase or eminent domain the output of every coal mine in Virginia which it considered necessary.

Tuck told the council the business of getting out coal would take precedence over all other State activities—and the State would provide as many men and as much money as necessary.

The Governor's office said Tuck hoped to get regular miners to go back to work for the State. If that fails, the Governor was said to intend to use State Highway Department personnel and any other men available.

"We're going to keep Virginia warm no matter what it costs," Tuck said as he signed the order.

Coal to Be Sold at Cost

The Governor authorized the council to distribute and sell at cost to State departments any coal mined under the State order.

Tuck also gave the council power to perform "all other acts needful and necessary in providing fuel for the people of Virginia."

In a letter to Gen. James A. Anderson, State Highway Commissioner and chairman of the fuel commission, Tuck denounced John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers chieftain whose miners walked out of pits in the western mountains of Virginia as well as the rest of the Nation.

"The tyrannical action of a single union labor leader whose edicts take no cognizance whatever of the welfare of the Nation or its individual citizens," the letter said, "cannot be allowed to endanger the health and safety of the people of this State."

Traffic Kills 2; District's Toll Is 8 in 11 Days

Two persons died yesterday as a result of traffic accidents in Greater Washington. The District's toll rose to 8 in 11 days.

In another accident at Hagerstown, Md., three more Greater Washington residents were hurt, one seriously.

Falco

Fatalities yesterday were Francis E. Proctor, 73, of 3 New York ave. nw., and Falco Bruno, 5, of 6014 State st., North Englewood, near Cheverly, Md.

Struck by Streetcar

Proctor was struck by a westbound streetcar Tuesday afternoon on Pennsylvania ave. nw. near Jackson pl. The streetcar, police said, was operated by Michael C. Embry, jr., 24, of Cheverly, Md.

Proctor was taken to Emergency Hospital with possible fractures of the skull and right hip and several scalp lacerations. He was later transferred to Freedmen's Hospital where he died at 8:30 a. m. yesterday.

Witnesses told police Proctor was not in the crosswalk and was walking against a red light trying to catch an eastbound streetcar. No date has been set for an inquest.

Falco Bruno, son of Nick Bruno, was pronounced dead on arrival at Prince Georges General Hospital yesterday at 4:26 p. m. Police said he was struck by a car driven by Edward Corman, 59, of 1507 Varnum st. nw. Corman operates the Tuxedo Supermarket in Prince Georges County.

Skull Fractured

Corman told police he was driving south on State st. near 61st st. when the accident occurred. He did not see the Bruno child, he said, but heard a bump when the car hit him.

Ezio Rebechi, 18, of 6409 State st., said he saw Falco run from the sidewalk into the right side of Corman's car. Police said the right rear wheel of the car passed over the child. Hospital officials said the boy died of a fractured skull.

Health Department Asks Funds For Expansion of Program

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

The District Health Department today will file its second bid for major shares of District sales tax receipts.

Its officials will ask $5,147,856 to operate during the next fiscal year, about half again as much money as Congress allowed them for the current year ending next June 30.

The department budget, released for publication today, does not include costs of running its hospitals, for which $10,883,354 was requested in a separate budget made public yesterday.

The combined budgets total $16,021,210. For operations during the current fiscal year, Congress granted $11,033,732, of which $3,441,848 was allocated to the department and $7,591,884 to run the hospitals.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, retiring District Health Officer, justified the requests for additional money with a clear-cut program of what the department wants to do with the money. The program includes:

1. Construction of a $750,000 health clinic in central Northwest Washington to cover health needs of that populous area.

2. Inauguration of a home treatment service for the city's chronically ill indigents, an expandable program budgeted to begin modestly with streptomycin treatment of tubercular patients in their own

AEC to Seek Authority for Expansion

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The Atomic Energy Commission will soon ask Congress to grant it authority to make large new contracts and to give it several million dollars for immediate expenditures.

The commission, it was learned yesterday, has been spurred by the discovery of the Russian atomic explosion to advance the timetable on vast new construction projects.

In the 1950 fiscal year appropriation, it is allowed $378 million for advance contracting. The commission is expected to ask, as a supplemental authorization, about this much again.

Swifter Building Sought

Its appropriation for actual expenditures during the current fiscal year is $742 million. The commission will ask for 30 to 60 million dollars more.

The new contracting authority will permit a swifter building of new plants than had been planned. The projects have been under preparation on AEC desks for about eight months. The decision now is to push them ahead as fast as possible.

If the authority is granted, the contracts will be made this year for execution over the next three or four years.

The relatively small size of the funds to be requested for spending this year is evidence of the fact that the commission has already been moving at near top speed. With or without the Russian threat, it does not have the capacity to spend much more than it is already doing.

'Old Timers' in Demand

The commission will take another, perhaps equally important step to speed atomic weapons production in quality and quanity. It will seek to bring back into military work large numbers of the scientific "old timers." These are the top-flight American pioneers in theoretical and nuclear physics—the great names who worked at Columbia and Chicago, Oak Ridge, Los Alamos and Berkeley to make the original bombs.

A few of them, such as Robert J. Oppenheimer, remained as consultants and advisors to the commission. But most went back to their universities and laboratories. The commission counts on their recognition of the seriousness of Russia's unexpected show of speed to induce them to resume work on military aspects of atomic energy. This was work which they were loath to continue when the war ended.

Two Ways of Enlistment

A commission spokesman explained that it had, in younger researchers, "a fine and promising new crop of captains and majors, but what we need also is some help and advice from the division commanders."

The commission hopes to enlist them in two ways. Some will be asked to join up for brief but recurrent periods as consultants, analysts and tossers-out of new ideas on military applications. Others, remaining at their universities, will be asked to devote themselves again to further work in fundamental nuclear research

U. S. Taunted On A-Bomb By Vishinsky

Lake Success, Sept. 28 (NYHT.). — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky asserted in the United Nations today for the first time that the American monopoly on the atomic bomb had ended.

Other similar statements by Russian officials have mentioned only the atomic "secret."

Vishinsky's comment came on the eve of the first U.N. meeting on the atomic problem since President Truman last Friday announced the Soviet Union had achieved an atomic explosion.

Vishinsky, in the full torrent of a denunciation of the Nationalist Chinese government during a steering committee debate, threw out just one taunting phrase:

"The great United States, with all its billions, with its armaments and its atomic bomb monopoly—which, alas, has now lapsed—could not lead the Kuomintang government to victory over Chinese Communists," Vishinsky proclaimed.

$1.3 Billion Arms Bill Passed by Congress

House and Senate yesterday completed action on the $1,314,000,000 bill to help friendly nations arm against communism. Story on Page 2.

Vote 11 to 2 for Approval

The committee, however, voted 11 to 2 to approve the Chinese item for preliminary consideration by the political committee.

The Soviet Union, along with the United States, Britain, France, China and Canada will resume Thursday private six-power consultations here on efforts for atomic control. The Assembly has called for a report during its present session on these closed-door talks, which began after the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission suspended last July 29.

Sir Bengal Narsing Rau, chief Indian delegate, urged in a radio broadcast to the Far East that the International Law Commission, an assembly agency, extract a declaration from agreed portions of the majority atomic control plan already approved by the assembly last year, a plan which the Soviet Union has refused to accept. He said he would submit a formal resolution later in the session.

Chinese Charge Denied

The disagreement over the American-backed majority plan arises from its requirement that outlawing of atomic weapons be coupled with controls, which would include actual U. N. operation of dangerous atomic facilities. The Soviet Union has called for outlawing atomic weapons, with a control scheme depending on national operation, policed by occasional U. N. inspection.

Vishinsky, in a 20-minute oration, denied the Chinese Nationalist charge that Russia is helping the Chinese Communists.

Vishinsky told the steering committee that doom was closing down fast on the Canton regime. He cited the recent State Department

House Votes Pay Rise For 885,000 Workers For U. S. and District

In Stormy Night Session

Raises for Top U. S. Officials Cut by Rebellious Senate

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate last night tentatively approved a compromise pay increase for top Government officials, sharply cutting back salary raises President Truman asked for his key men.

The vote was 36 to 19.

The action came in a stormy night session, following a Senate rebellion against paying high Federal executives more salary than Congressmen receive.

Without completing action on the measure, the Senate recessed at 11:59 p. m. until noon today.

The substitute bill, reluctantly accepted by the Administration leadership, raises cabinet officers from $15,000 to $22,500, instead of to the $25,000 proposed. Most other executives were held down to the $15,000 level legislators themselves receive in salaries and tax free expense accounts.

The Senate adopted unanimously an amendment by Senator Paul A. Douglas (D., Ill.) directing the various Government departments to completely absorb the estimated $700,000 cost of the compromise increase.

Another amendment by Senator John J. Williams (R., Del.) even sought to hold up the modified pay raise until the President proclaims the budget can be balanced. This was rejected, 39 to 17, following a bitter party-line debate.

Under the compromise only two White House administrative assistants at $20,000 each and three more at $18,000 were permitted, along with Cabinet officials, to rise above the $15,000 ceiling.

An amendment by Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.) provided $12,500 a year for two White House legislative aides.

Senator Burnett R. Maybank (D., S. C.) sought to make an exception in the Congressional salary rule in the case of governors of

Murray Bill Plus Measure to Boost Postal Employes Goes to Senate

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The House yesterday gave speedy approval to the Murray bill to give 885,000 Federal and District classified employes an average pay boost of $113.57 a year. Approval was by voice vote.

The Senate today will take up the measure along with a bill to boost salaries of 500,000 postal employes. The Murray bill is estimated to cost 100 million dollars a year.

An estimated 175,000 Federal and District government employes in and near this city would benefit by the Murray bill. Another 15,000 would get pay raises in the postal bill.

The only real fight on the House bill was over an amendment by Representative Rees (R., Kans.), who wanted to cut the classified pay ceiling proposed in the bill from $15,000 to $12,000. The Rees amendment was defeated, 94 to 90.

VA Doctor Raise Passes

Meanwhile, the Senate unanimously approved and sent to the White House a bill to raise salaries of 17,000 Veterans Administration doctors, nurses and dentists. The same salary schedule would be used to pay doctors, dentists and nurses in Army and Navy hospitals under a Senate-approved rider to the military appropriation bill.

These are among the provisions carried in the Murray bill:

To provide an average pay raise of $125 for 100,000 employes in the crafts, protective and custodial service;

To transfer clerical-mechanical employes in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing here to the Treasury wage board for wage-fixing purposes;

To allow any classified employe to appeal his job classification to the Civil Service Commission;

Longevity Increases

To provide longevity increases for the first time in history for classified employes. In the first 10 grades, employes would be limited to three additional in-grade promotions over the tops of their respective grades, one after every three years;

To prohibit a reduction in salary for any classified employe by revision of the classification act;

To define each of the proposed new 18 grades, and the Civil Service Commission would have to use the definitions as a guide in classifying jobs;

To make it illegal for the salary of a supervisor to be based on the number of employes he supervises, and finally;

To exempt the Atomic Energy Commission, Production Credit Corporation, the Federal Intermediate Credit Banks, the Panama Canal Railway, and Panama teach-

Navy Cramps Admirals in B-36 Inquiry

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Apparently under pressure from above, the Navy is planning to sharply curtail its prepared "side of the case" in the congressional B-36 investigation.

Navy Secretary Francis Matthews, said Capitol Hill sources, has ordered naval officer witnesses to make no mention of the B-36 bomber in testifying before the House Armed Services Committee when that group resumes its probe next Wednesday.

This would rule out any evidence in refutation of Air Force claims for the controversial bomber. It has been reported that more than one admiral had planned testimony along this line.

May Limit Witnesses to Four

These same congressional sources also said that Matthews contemplates limiting the Navy's witnesses to four top admirals and may hold them to a defense of the place of the Navy under current and future world conditions.

Where the reported pressure came from is not known, but it was established that two members of the B-36 probe investigation staff called on Matthews Tuesday to discuss the Navy's presentation of testimony.

They are reported to have warned the Secretary that the agenda of the probe probably will be drastically cut when the committee reconvenes next week.

Crommelin May Not Appear

Should the Navy's list of witnesses be confined to top admirals, this would bar Capt. John G. Crommelin from being heard—unless the committee insisted on calling him. Crommelin set off a controversy by charging that Pentagon chiefs are undermining the national security by hamstringing naval aviation. He demanded a congressional investigation.

Admiral William (Bull) Halsey and other admirals urged that the House committee hear what Crommelin has to say.

According to the word received by some members of Congress, the four admirals selected to give

Pound Action Is Denounced By Churchill

London, Sept. 28 (AP).—Winston Churchill today called devaluation of the pound a lamentable and serious disaster for Britain and asked Parliament to oust the Labor government.

The former Prime Minister who leads the Conservative Party ripped into Sir Stafford Cripps as a blundering Chancellor of the Exchequer who lacked foresight and turned "completely round like a squirrel in his cage."

Motion of Confidence

Then he offered a motion of no confidence in the Labor government. If the motion should be carried in the vote Thursday at the end of an emergency three-day session, Prime Minister Attlee would have to resign and take his case to the voters in a general election. However Labor has 393 of the 640 seats in the House of Commons.

The predominantly Conservative House of Lords tonight rejected, 93 to 24, a government motion approving devaluation. It then adopted, without a record vote, an opposition motion criticizing the government. The Lords' vote carries little weight. The real test comes in the Commons Thursday.

Churchill, who put the pound back on the gold standard a quarter of a century ago, said the September 18 devaluation of sterling from $4.03 to $2.80 was untimely and a "new and serious drain upon the life strength of Britain."

"Verge of Bankruptcy"

He charged the Labor Government with having brought Britain "to the verge of national and international bankruptcy" and proposed his own program:

1. Let the pound seek its own level on "a free and true market" without government restrictions.

2. Cut taxes to increase the incentive to work.

3. Ease up on "needless and vexatious controls and interference with the flexibility of private enterprise."

4. Stop the Socialist policy of nationalization of industry, "a ghastly failure and a further drain upon our life's blood."

5. Elect a new government with

Yale Cancels 2 Football Games Because of Polio

New Haven, Sept. 28 (AP).—Yale University announced late today that Saturday's football game with Fordham has been cancelled because of three "mild cases" of polio among students, one of them a football player.

The university also announced that a football game between the Yale freshmen and Cheshire Academy, which like the Fordham game had been scheduled to be played here, also had been cancelled. All intramural sports will be called off for ten days.

The announcement said two new cases had been diagnosed today as "mild" cases of polio. The stricken football player is Richard D. Liechty, a senior backfield man from Lake Geneva, Wis. He played in Saturday's game against Connecticut. The second student discovered to have the disease today is William C. Butler, a senior from Winnetka, Ill. A third Yale student, Salvatore Miano, had previously come down with polio.

None of the three is paralyzed.

Mother and Son Found Guilty As 'Lonely Hearts' Murderers

Dover, Del., Sept. 28 (U.P.).—Sixteen-year-old Robert Brennan and his mother were convicted of first-degree murder tonight in the slaying of her aged Virginia suitor but an arrest of judgment stayed the verdict until October 14.

On that date, the three-judge court will have studied the legal aspects of the verdict and announce its findings.

A legal technicality arose when the jury, in returning its verdict, recommended mercy for Robert, but not for his mother, Inez, 46.

Defense Attorney Benjamin R. Donolow immediately demanded an arrest of judgment. He pointed out that under Delaware law Mrs. Brennan, on trial as an accomplice in the slaying of Wade N. Wooldridge, 77, could not receive greater punishment than the principal.

Robert, accused of the actual slaying of Wooldridge of Stone Mountain, Va., last October 10, was the principal in the case. When the jury recommended mercy in his case, it meant he possibly could escape the death penalty and get life imprisonment instead.

The verdict came after five hours and 11 minutes deliberation. The case went to the jury after the State demanded a verdict of first-degree murder but did not ask for a death penalty.

Chief Justice Charles S. Richards instructed the jury of 10 men and two women that it could return with one of five verdicts ranging from hanging to acquittal.

In his summation, Attorney General Albert W. James said the State had proved that Robert killed Wooldridge with a shotgun the day after the victim arrived on the Brennan farm to marry Mrs. Brennan.

Congress Approves Full Arms Aid Sum

Conferees End Deadlock On ECA Fund

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Senate and House conferees yestardey finally broke a seven-week deadlock on foreign aid funds, with these chief results:

1. The Economic Cooperation Administration will get about 10 percent less money than it originally asked last spring;

2. The so-called watchdog committee will be kept alive until the end of the present fiscal year, but with only half as much money as it formerly had, and

3. ECA Administrator Paul Hoffman can ask for a new study of the factory-dismantling program in Germany, but only if he "considers it advisable."

ECA Officials Released

In general, ECA officials were satisfied with the amount appropriated, delighted to get the money without crippling or inconvenient restrictions and vastly relieved to have the long uncertainty ended.

They went before the House Appropriations Committee last April with a request for 4198 million dollars for the fiscal year. The House voted $3,568,470,000 for a 10½ months' period, an amount equivalent to about $4,015,000,000 for 12 months.

The Senate, on August 9, cut this to $3,628,380,000 for 12 months. Ever since then the appropriation bill has hung fire, with Senate and House conferees unwilling to budge on about three bitterly controversial items.

Feeling ran so high at times that some of the Senators and Representatives were not on speaking terms. This week some of the more irascible conferees had reached the stage of having coffee together, and yesterday they managed to agree with little apparent trouble or ill-feeling.

The House made most of the concessions in yesterday's meeting. Here is what the conference committee recommended:

$3,778,380,000 for ECA, including 150 million for loans;

$1,074,000,000 to cover ECA spending in the April-to-June quarter of the last fiscal year;

45 million dollars for Greece and Turkey;

$912,500,000 for Military Government and relief in Germany, Austria, Japan and the Ryukyu Islands; and $110,000 for expenses of the watchdog committee between now and next June 30. The Senate had asked for $34,000 for committee salaries and expenses for the fiscal year.

Figure 'Workable'

During its long wait for appropriations, ECA has been operating under a special congressional resolution and spending about 315 million dollars a month. The new appropriation bill will reduce this rate to about 302 million, a figure officials of the recovery agency yesterday said was "workable."

Although the dollar needs of some European countries have become more acute since last spring, the prices of important ECA materials have fallen. In any case, ECA operations are based on a decreasing rate of spending until 1952, when the four-year recovery program officially is destined to end.

Less than four months remain before ECA goes before the next session of Congress for a third-year authorization—this time for the 1950-1951 fiscal year. The third request is expected to be for about three billion dollars as against more than four billion for the second year and more than five billion for the first.

By the United Press

Congress gave its first concrete reply to the news that Russia has an atomic explosive yesterday by passing the $1,314,010,000 foreign arms aid bill and sending it to President Truman for his signature.

The bill was tailored to put "muscle" in the North Atlantic Security Alliance. Yesterday's action paves the way for this country to begin arms shipments to bolster other free nations in their struggle against communism as soon as they can be prepared for shipment.

While the present bill only authorizes the program and does not actually provide funds, it does permit the Administration to obtain a 125 million dollars "advance" from the Reconstruction Finance Corp. The money will be repaid when the money bill is passed.

Final action came in a rush after weeks of debate and delay. Some House members who originally had fought for a much smaller grant to the Western democracies made no secret of the fact that Mr. Truman's Russian announcement had changed their minds.

There was scattered but bitter opposition as the House finally approved a conference report on the measure by a roll-call vote of 223 to 109.

The bill then went to the Senate which approved it by voice vote.

Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) loosed a final blast at the measure, calling it the "wrong approach" to Western security because it emphasizes mass ground armies instead of atomic weapons carried by long-range American bombers.

He said Administration leaders were playing into the hands of the Kremlin by turning western Europe into "an armed camp" and providing grist for the Russian propaganda mills.

Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) told the Senate that Russia's atomic explosion necessitated emphasis on common defense planning.

Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) of the Foreign Relations Committee agreed, but warned that specific common plans could not be expected overnight.

In the House Representative Vito Marcantonio (A.L.P., N. Y.) protested that the bill was part of the Administration's "war policy."

It includes one billion dollars to help rearm the North Atlantic Pact nations—half in cash and half in contract authority—and $211,370,000 for military aid to Greece and Turkey. There also is $27,640,000 for Korea, Iran and the Philippines.

The measure also would permit—but not require—the President to spend as much as 75 million dollars to help anti-Communist forces in the "general area" of China.

Final details on the arms program still must be worked out. But the bulk of early shipments probably will go to France which would have to stand the brunt of any aggression in Europe. The money will be spent the first year but shipments will continue into the second.

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson told Congress the program likely will be needed four or five years. Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson said it's impossible to say how long it will last.

Military sources said it is hoped the program will enable the Western democracies to arm a highly-mobile 15-division force over the next three years. Such a force would be expected to hold out until the Western nations could achieve a full war footing.

Tactical Use of Bomb Studied, Devers Reveals

Gen. Jacob L. Devers recommended yesterday that military planners give "further study" to using the atomic bomb for direct troop support.

The retiring chief of the Army Field Forces made that one of his recommendations in a report covering the postwar activities of the Nation's foot soldiers. He didn't amplify his suggestion—which indicated that such use of the A-bomb has already been under consideration.

Devers is hanging up his sword Friday to take up farming at Herndon, Va., after an Army career of 44 years.

His report shows a planned step-up in major maneuvers in coming months to train the field army to fight in any climate from the arctic to the desert. Three major training exercises are scheduled for early 1950. Nine more large-scale maneuvers are planned for later.

Devers hinted at new weapons and equipment for the postwar Army—everything from cross-country trucks to a new-style undershirt. In line with the Army's emphasis on mobility, he also disclosed "promising progress" on new lightweight rifles and machineguns.

The retiring general recommended setting up an airhead corps of four divisions with supporting supply outfits to test the "controversial question of the possibility of large airborne operations."

He urged that the Arctic test branch created at Big Delta, Alaska, in July be continued at maximum strength.

And in connection with the reserve program he recommended the maintance of a high standard of requirements in the awarding of credit points for performance of reserve duty training.

"The inevitable shortage of funds and Regular Army personnel will have to be compensated for by reservists who assume more of the responsibilities for the training, administratio nd asnup D training, administration and supply of their units, if we are to have an active, realistic reserve program," he said.

In the maneuver department, a combined United States-Canadian exercise in the Arctic from January through March is first on the schedule.

A joint Army-Navy-Air Force amphibious and airborne assault is set for February-March on Vieques Island, Puerto Rico. Also in the spring will be a joint Army-Air Force exercise similar to that in North Carolina recently.

Blast Destroyed Red 'Atom City'

Amsterdam, Sept. 28 (AP).—The Amsterdam newspaper De Tijd reported today that all Russia's atomic scientists and all her atomic knowledge were wiped out when a Soviet "atomic city" blew up last spring.

The newspaper gave no source for its information, nor identify the city. Said its special correspondent:

"The explosion created violence suggesting an earthquake. Atmospheric changes resulting from it at distances of hundreds of kilometers have been observed."

The correspondent said the blast killed all Soviet scientists and their assistants working in the city and destroyed all Soviet atomic knowledge garnered thus far.

Russian Shift On A-Control Seen as Hope

By Eddy Gilmore

Moscow, Sept. 28 (AP).—Foreign diplomats in Moscow are asking one another if there is a slight chance of a compromise on control of atomic weapons.

The question centers on what Russia means by "control."

The diplomats have gone over carefully the September 25 speech of Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky before the U. N. Assembly in an effort to determine if there was something new in it. Pravda, Communist Party newspaper, said proposals offered in the Vishinsky speech were "new."

Vishinsky was quoted by Pravda as saying:

"In the same way as civilized nations have already long ago condemned as a most grave crime against humanity the use of poison gases and bacteriological means for military purposes, the General Assembly recognizes the use of atomic weapons and other means of extermination to be contrary to the conscience and honor of peoples, and incompatible with adherence to the U. N., considering further delay in adoption by the U. N. of practical steps for unconditional prohibition of atomic weapons and establishment of appropriate strict international control to be inadmissible."

If the words "strict international control," as used by Vishinsky, include inspection by a U. N. commission, the diplomats say, then the entire atomic control situation may have been altered.

These diplomats say there is some reason to believe the Russians now may be referring to international control as including inspection and that, if this is the case, there is a slight change for progress toward an agreement.

Vishinsky's other remarks, however, indicate the Russians have not changed their attitude toward the original United States proposal. They regard this plan, calling for international control of atomic processes from the mine to the finished product, as an invasion of national sovereignty.

AEC to Move for Expansion

which they may have abandoned for electronics or other research.

Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, yesterday alluded to the plans for increased construction and the enlistment of more personnel.

After a closed meeting with members of the AEC, McMahon said the discussion touched on increased facilities, increased scientific personnel and increased ore production.

He said the group had not talked about supplemental appropriations. But, he intimated, the matter might come up at other meetings with the AEC. He has planned a series of three or four in the next few weeks.

The commission is expected to make its request for new funds within 10 days or two weeks.

McMahon emphasized that the Nation's atomic weapons production had been increasing. It is progressively better, he said, "and we hope to see it further increased in quality as well as quantity."

He added it was hoped to increase production of uranium-bearing ores, but he admitted that there had not been presently "discovered or ascertained" enough ore within the United States to meet its needs.

Meanwhile, Acting Secretary of State James E. Webb told a news conference that the United States is willing to "consider" a new approach to the question of international atomic control but that this country's plan is the best advanced "so far."

His use of the words "so far" seemed to indicate that this country concedes that some new control plan could be worked out if Russia and the United States can break the United Nations deadlock which has blocked agreement for many months.

The control plan proposed by this country was approved by the U. N. General Assembly last fall but blocked by Russia, which opposes the international inspection which is the heart of the program.

Webb also hinted that proposals to stockpile some American A-bombs in Britain have been discussed at the current atomic discussions between the United States, Britain and Canada. The three wartime atomic partners are studying closer cooperation.

Czechs Seize U. S. Bulletin

Prague, Sept. 28 (AP). — The Czechoslovak government confiscated the U. S. Information Service's daily bulletin distributed here today, claiming it contained an "insult" to Russia.

The alleged insult, the Czechs said, was contained in the bulletin's reprint of a New York Times editorial which suggested that German scientists had helped the Russians in discovering the secret of the atomic bomb.

Joseph Kolarek, press attache of the U. S. Embassy who is in charge of the bulletin, said Czech authorities told him they objected to the following sentence in the editorial reprinted from the Times:

"It is an obvious conclusion (as has often been stated by competent scientists) that sooner or later the Russians would succeed in splitting the atom, especially if they had—and they do have—the help of borrowed German scientists."

Navy Cramps Its Witnesses

the Navy's limited presentation are Admiral Louis Denfeld, chief of naval operations; Admiral Arthur W. Radford, commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet; Admiral William H. P. Blandy, commander in chief of the Atlantic Fleet, and Admiral Richard Conolly, commander of European-Mediterranean forces.

In June, the House committee voted unanimously on an eight-point agenda for its investigation. Point one was to establish the truth or falsity of the charges made against the B-36 and Defense chiefs. The committee concluded that they were unfounded. It has partially established the source of the charges—point two.

The other points call for determining: (1) Whether the B-36 is a satisfactory bomber; (2) whether the cancellation of the Navy's super aircraft carrier was a wise decision; (3) whether the Air Force is neglecting tactical aviation in its emphasis on strategic bombing; (4) can two of the three armed services determine the weapons of the third; (5) is the present emphasis on strategic bombing sound; (6) all other pertinent questions.

Navy partisans on the committee have urged that because top Air Force chiefs gave detailed testimony in support of their concepts of warfare, they should hear the Navy's side fully. Army and Air Force chiefs, however, contend that such questions should be left for the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the new Weapons System Evaluation Group, and have brought pressure to close off the hearings without going into the latter points on the agenda.

Chicago Puts Civil Defense On Atomic Disaster Footing

Chicago, Sept. 28 (U.P.).—A special defense committee reported to Mayor Martin H. Kennelly today that the city is putting its police, fire and other departments on a disaster footing in case of an atom bomb attack.

Chicago, believed the first major city in the Nation to take positive action toward meeting any future atomic attack, has had a so-called "disaster plan" for a year, but Kennelly ordered it into action last week after the announcement of an atomic explosion in Russia.

The mayor met with some 20 members of the defense committee, composed of city department heads and representatives of the Red Cross, the Fifth Army, public utilities and other organizations.

Atomic Defense Plans Laid, Fire Chiefs Hear

(Special to The Post)

New Orleans, Sept. 28.—Civilian Defense planning officials at Washington "are fully aware" of the news of an atomic explosion in Russia and have given it "appropriate consideration," William A. Gill, coordinator of civil defense planning, said here today.

Addressing the International Association of Fire Chiefs here, Gill said the Federal Government has in operation or on the planning boards, "programs for the training of personnel in unfamiliar or unconventional types of attack such as atomic, biological and chemical. But it remains for the States and communities to utilize those programs in a manner that will be most beneficial to them."

He added:

"The Federal Government is developing and will furnish standards for the use of States and communities in determining their actual or presumed vulnerability to attack. The rest is up to the community and the State. The Federal Government conceivably may go so far as to suggest to States and communities the conditions which should prevail and the resources which should be available in order to place a State or a community in a position of complete readiness for assisting in averting enemy attack, for minimizing the effects of enemy attack and for dealing with disaster created by such attacks. It will then be up to the State or community to decide how far it can go at any given time in the light of the economic, psychological and political factors involved, in achieving at least a partial degree of readiness under peacetime conditions."

West Cuts Off Talks With Reds on Berlin

Berlin, Sept. 28 (AP).—The West's commanders broke off today the talks with Russia ordered last June by the four-power foreign ministers in an effort to restore divided Berlin to normal life.

The consultations were ordered when the four powers found themselves unable to agree on any long-range policies in Germany even after the ending of the Berlin blockade.

The breakdown came over Berlin's Soviet-run railway system.

The American, British and French commandants charged that Russia is failing to carry out the settlement that ended the 38-day strike of non-Communist railway workers June 28.

The three Western commandants called a meeting on the situation today. Maj. Gen. Alexander Kotikov, the Soviet commandant, failed to attend.

Want Reassurance on Pledges

In a sharp letter to Kotikov, the Western commanders declared: "We are not prepared to continue with discussions on the normalization of life in Berlin until we can be confident that agreements freely negotiated will be honored by the Soviet authorities."

French Gen. Jean Ganeval told reporters that since the strike settlement "the Soviet authorities have never stopped violating the promises they gave."

"We have warned them repeatedly, and have tried twice to have four-power meetings on the subject," he said. "The Soviets always managed to evade them."

The letter to Kotikov told him his failure to attend today's meeting "makes it imposible for us to retain any confidence in the willingness of the Soviet authorities in Berlin to abide by any agreement reached except when it suits them to do so."

"Without mutual confidence these quadripartite discussions are valueless," it said.

Claim Revenues Insufficient

A communique reviewed the four-power railway quarrel, which began last May when non-Communist workers in West Berlin demanded all their pay in West marks, instead of East marks. West marks are now valued at 30 cents, East marks at 5 cents.

In the settlement the Russians agreed to pay 60 percent in West marks until October 1, and 100 percent after that if West mark revenues of the railways were sufficient.

The City of Berlin, with the financial support of the western military governments, agreed to convert the remaining 40 percent of wages into West marks.

The Russians now say their revenues in west marks are too low to carry out the 100 percent conversion. The western commandants said, however, they estimate the revenues are exceeding 4,500,000 west marks monthly or more than the total wage bill. The railways accept fares in either east or west marks, according to where they are paid.

West Stops Conversion

The western commandants announced they were stopping immediately their conversion of the 40 percent of rail wages into west marks. They explained that this exchange, costing nearly 2,000,000 west marks a month, "was really a Soviet obligation which we assumed."

This stoppage means that an average railway worker earning 300 marks a month will draw the equivalent of only $60. If it was converted 100 percent into west marks it would be worth $90.

Brannan's View

'Point Four' Vital to U. S. Agriculture

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan said yesterday the American farmer's need of foreign markets makes President Truman's "Point 4" foreign policy program vitally important to agriculture.

Brannan was the second Cabinet member in as many days to indorse Mr. Truman's "bold new program" for lending United States technical and economic assistance to the world's underdeveloped areas.

The Agriculture Secretary explained his point to the House Foreign Affairs Committee:

"As other countries benefit from the proposed program we will, of course, also benefit. Prosperity must be shared to keep on being prosperous.

"Only the developed areas are good customers for the United States today. Countries making up only 11 percent of the world's population are providing us with more than half of our markets. The underdeveloped countries, and this includes about half the people of the world, have such low purchasing power that our marketing opportunities with them are extremely restricted."

The plan—which calls for a $40,000,000 first-year outlay—was endorsed by two committee members, Rep. Judd (R., Minn.) and Rep. Javits (R., Lib.-N.Y.). But few would predict passage this season, as Mr. Truman wishes.

Brannan testified that "the United States is geared to a high level of production, both farm and industry, and we need sound markets overseas in order to stay in that gear."

Likening the plan to the "good neighbor" policy, Brannan noted that this country's agriculture extension work in Latin America has produced two-way benefits. The republics to the south have become major sources of such needed materials as rubber, bamboo, rotenone, a jute substitute, and coffee.

Nelson Rockefeller, former Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, is due to testify Friday.

Reddish Tints Decreed For Women's Hair

Paris, Sept. 28 (U.P.).—Women's hair will have to have a definite reddish tinge in 1950 to be in style, the French Hairdressers Association said today.

"We are launching three important tints for 1950," Vice President Pierre Rene said today—"Honeysuckle for blondes, golden seaweed for redheads, and black tulip for brunettes."

British Sign Trade Pact With Czechs

London, Sept. 28 (NYHT).—Britain today took an important step toward decreasing its dependence on the dollar area when it signed a series of trade and financial agreements with Czechoslovakia.

The way now is open for Britain to increase its imports of raw materials and foodstuffs from another soft-currency source.

The agreement states that Czechoslovakia will pay eight million pounds in the next 10 years in compensation for British property affected by Czech nationalization and expropriation.

The debts agreement provides for repayment of Czechoslovak debts totaling 28 million pounds. Czechoslovakia will pay 15 million pounds in the next five years.

Czechslovakia will send to Britain in the first year essential goods valued at £4,800,000. Czechoslovakia will import from the United Kingdom goods in easy supply worth £1,500,000.

Reds Free U. S. College Boys Kept in Jail for Two Months

Hamburg, Germany, Sept. 28 (AP).—Two American college boys, gaunt and pale from two months in Soviet zone jails, were released by the Russians today. The first thing they wanted was a good meal.

The two are Warren Oelsner, 20, of Oyster Bay, N. Y., and Peter Sellers, 19, of Radnor, Pa. They said they were arrested as spy suspects, handcuffed at times and held in "dungeons" below street level after bicycling into the Soviet zone July 31 without a Russian permit.

The U. S. Military Mission at Potsdam obtained their release after weeks of negotiation. Fresh American clothing was supplied them. The youths were turned over to a detail of American military policemen at Magdeburg, about 25 miles inside the Soviet zone.

Brig. Gen. W. W. Hess, jr., chief of the mission, motored with the youths in his own limousine to Hamburg where Oelsner's father, Warren Oelsner, sr., awaited them and arranged for air passage Thursday to take his son and Sellers back to the United States.

Sellers and Oelsner said they had started out to cycle from western Germany to Berlin, and did not realize how seriously the Russians regarded unlicensed travel.

Oelsner did most of the talking. He said he protested about the food in Schwerin and in Magdeburg, breaking up cell furniture, and the Russians slapped the two into what amounted to solitary confinement for 18 days.

"We got about 600 grams (a little more than a pound) of bread, fish and porridge every day," Oelsner said. "They fed us enough toward the end. I asked for food one time and pounded on the door. They put me in handcuffs. When I resisted, about five of them piled on me and one hit me in the face."

The Soviet guards never told them why they were held, Oelsner said, except to "give the impression they thought we were spies."

Several times Russian interrogators asked them about American and British troops in the western zones. The youths, in Germany only a few weeks on vacation from the University of Pennsylvania, had no information to give.

The Russians gave them only 10 minutes notice this morning that they would be released. Neither Oelsner nor Sellers knew of a Russian demand for the return of three Soviet army deserters in exchange for them. Whether any such arrangement was made has not been announced.

Allied Mark Cut Decried By Germans

Bonn, Germany, Sept. 28. (UP) The Western Allied powers today recommended that the West German mark be devalued from 30 to 23.8 cents. But the new West German government refused to accept the new rate. German officials will meet with the Allied High Commissioners Thursday to work out a more satisfactory agreement.

German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer also refused to accept a simultaneous recommendation by the occupation authorities which would prevent an increase in the export price of German coal.

The Germans charged that the High Commissioners had exceeded their authority in recommending the devaluation of the mark from 30 to 23.8 cents.

A British military spokesman said, however, that the Allied decision was a "recommendation" and not an order. He said the High Commissioners had decided not to "raise objections" to the 23.8-cent rate but did not reject the possibility of another rate being agreed upon.

The new rate was announced after 10 days of wrangling between the British and Americans on one side and the French on the other.

France wanted a 25-cent rate, opposing a large devaluation for fear of German competition in trade. The United States, Britain and Germany wanted a 22.5-cent rate, feeling it would stimulate German exports.

The compromise figure of 23.8 cents was reached today to the dismay of the new German cabinet.

The Allies supplemented the new mark rate with provisions prohibiting an increase in the export price of German coal and ordering an end to any existing practices of discrimination or subsidies in coal production.

Adenauer charged the new rate was to satisfy French demands.

Paris Expects Cabinet to End Wage-Price Rift Today

Paris, Sept. 28 (NYHT).—The French Cabinet is expected to reach agreement Thurday on a plan to reduce the gap between wages and prices, thus meeting trade union demands and maintaining financial stability, it was reported tonight.

"Cordial disagreement," according to the well-informed newspaper, Le Monde, still existed between Socialist Minister of Labor Daniel Mayer and Finance Minister Maurice Petsche, a Liberal.

However, after a meeting today btween Premier Henri Queuille and his ministers with Vincent Auriol, president of the Republic, an official statesman said the political tension had relaxed. President Auriol was said to have stressed the necessity of reaching an agreement and avoiding a Government crisis.

The opposing ministers are consulting with their technicians tonight in preparation for Thursday's meeting when, it is believed, a satisfactory decision will be reached.

Unified Sea Service In Effect on Oct. 1

The new unified Military Sea Transportation Service will go into effect October 1.

This service, under jurisdiction of the Navy, is the ocean-going counterpart of the Military Air Transport Service which the Air Force bosses. Later there will be set up a Military Land Transport Service which the Army will run.

Into the new Sea Transporation Service will go 94 naval vessels and 227 vessels of the "Army's navy," primarily personnel transports and supply ships.

Marshall Plan Nations Losing Ground, Says ECA

By The Associated Press

The Marshall Plan nations have been losing ground this year, instead of making progress, in their efforts to pay for American imports with earned dollars.

The Economic Cooperation Administration reported that June figures, the most recent available, show the gap between exports and imports to be 250 million dollars a year greater than in June of 1948.

In its survey of business trends in the 19 Marshall Plan countries, ECA noted a sharp decline of 60 million dollars in Marshall area exports to this country in the three months ended June 30.

In 1938, the last prewar year for Europe, exports covered 41 per cent of imports from this country. The figure now is 16 percent, ECA reported. Only Britain and Iceland are doing better than in 1938.

Shipments to the United States fell to $59,700,000, or 30 percent below the 85 million dollars in exports in the same month in 1948.

courage and "commanding national and international confidence."

Asked About His Racehorse

The wartime leader stuck closely to domestic issues throughout his speech, lasting just over an hour. But at the beginning he mentioned the atomic bomb in a reference to the present "grave hour."

"Overall there looms and broods the atomic bomb which the Russian Soviet, for reasons not yet explained, have got before the British, though happily not before the Americans," he said.

Once he was heckled. Laborite Percy Shurmer asked why, if he is feeling the pinch of devaluation he did not sell his racehorse, Colonist the Second.

"I could sell it for a great deal more than I paid for it, but I am trying to rise above profit motives," Churchill rejoined.

The horse, the only racer Churchill owns, has won three straight races.

In a rebuttal for the government, Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade, said Churchill had made "what is frankly an electioneering speech." He said he expected devaluation in a short time to treble the rate of exports of consumer goods to the United States and increase tenfold the export of capital goods to Canada.

Stock Shares Drop

Shares on the London Stock Exchange skidded sharply during the debate. The setback followed the announcement by Cripps yesterday that the tax on business profits is being raised from 25 per cent to 30 per cent.

Churchill made these points:

Britain's economic predicament is "both serious and strange" and it is high time she had a new parliament and government.

"In this last four lavish years the Socialist Government have exacted upwards of 16 billion pounds ($44,800,000,000 at the new rate of exchange) and spent them—over four times as much every year as was the cost of running the country in our richer days before the war."

"They have used up every national asset or reserve upon which they could lay their hands. They have taken 40 percent of the national income for the purpose of governmental administration, and our taxation has been the highest in the world."

Britain is at the verge of bankruptcy, Churchill said, despite the fact "in all history no community has ever been helped and kept by gratuitous overseas aid—that is by labor of other hardworking peoples—to anything approaching the degree which we have been under the present Socialist Government."

'Timing' Attacked

Devaluation means the British must 'do more work and draw more upon our spirits and carcases to win back the same amount of food, raw materials and other goods without which we cannot carry on."

"Great strength still resides in the sterling area." This was shown when many other countries had to devalue at the same time—"roughly as they were used and little though they were consulted."

This strength, working freely, would in a short time raise the pound far above the $2.80 rate "to which we have been condemned."

"A sham market can no more escape a black market than a man can escape his shadow."

If Cripps thought he had to devalue the pound "I think it was right to go the whole hog" to $2.80.

But the timing was wrong because devaluation should not have been left "until a crisis broke upon us."

Cripps blundered by not exercising "foresight and decision in good time before our remaining gold reserves had drained away and he was forced higgeldy-piggeldy into the action which we know he loathes, and in the worst possible circumstances."

"I have been shown nine quotations from the Chancellor's speeches declaring himself an inveterate opponent of devaluation."

Churchill Tells Commons He Has Plenty of Epithets

London, Sept. 28 (U.P.).—Winston Churchill's attack on Sir Stafford Cripps brought shouts of protest from the labor benches, today but Churchill replied:

"I will pick my epithets with care, and I have a large selection of them."

U.S. Newsmen Rated 'High' in Argentine

Buenos Aires, Sept. 28. (AP)—The Argentine government informed the United States today that it harbors only "the greatest goodwill and desire to help" toward American correspondents, newspapers and magazines.

The avowal was contained in Argentina's formal reply to a United States note delivered last July 28 calling attention of Argentine authorities to several alleged cases of censorship against American correspondents and of refusal to permit the use of local radio facilities for broadcasting United States news.

The Argentine reply lamented that in some cases there had been "some inconveniences."

In expressing concern over a series of reported censorship incidents, the American note said that the daily United States Information Service broadcasts were barred from the air July 22 and 23.

It cited a report that a dispatch for Time Magazine filed by its correspondent here July 22 was not transmitted to New York. It mentioned also that radio correspondents were refused access to studio transmitting facilities in March.

In reference to the barring of the USIS broadcasts, the Argentine reply pointed out that the station involved was owned privately and that state authorities exercise no control over broadcasting. It added that the government "disposes of no organism to interfere with broadcasting."

In connection with the Time magazine dispatch, the note said no original dispatch could be found in the official files for the date specified and requested further details.

The dispatch, said to have been filed by Time correspondent Robert Neville, reportedly dealt with alleged police tortures here.

As to the charge that correspondents for American broadcasting networks were unable to obtain short-wave transmitting studio facilities, the Argentine note again stressed that such facilities are privately owned and that it is not in the province of the state to interfere with them.

New Argentine Parties Face Peron Hurdle

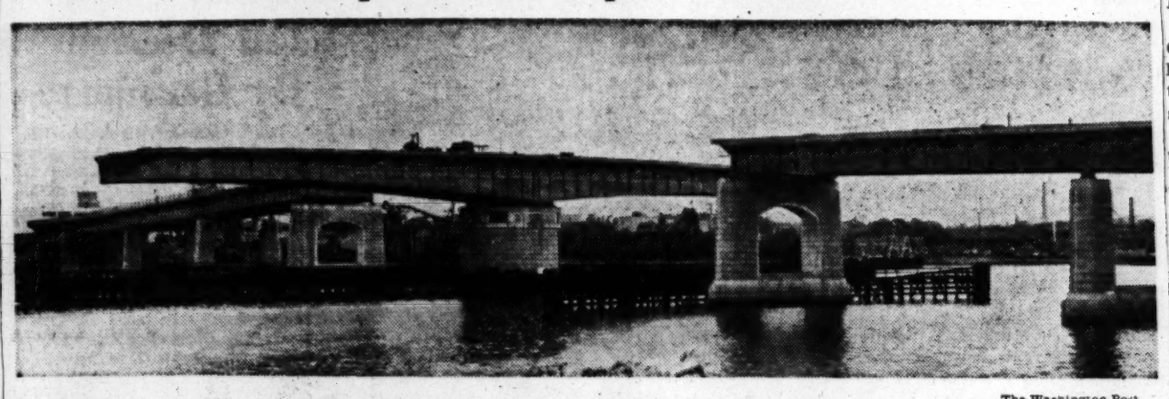
Buenos Aires, Sept. 28 (AP).—Leaders of President Peron's dominant Peronista Party asked the Argentine Congress today to approve a new law making it almost impossible for their opponents to form new political parties.

Approval was expected before Congress adjourned Friday.

Under the bill sponsors of a new party would have to register its name, doctrines, platform and officers—then wait three years for recognition.

Even then the courts could refuse to approve the party if the judge believed it endangered "social peace," incited to violence, tried to change the establishment of order, admitted connection with international parties or failed to recognize the Argentine constitution, laws and authorities.

'Draw' of South Capitol Street Span in Place . . .



The Washington Post

PROGRESS REPORT—The swinging span of the South Capitol Street Bridge—reputedly the largest one-piece span in the world—is in place and was closed yesterday for the first time. The 386-foot section moved easily into place and work proceeded on pouring concrete on the bridge decks, erection of handrails and lampposts in preparation for November 15 opening

102 Dismissed After Inquiry Into Loyalty

More than 100 Government workers have been fired under the loyalty program, the Loyalty Review Board reported yesterday.

The board, in a review of its activities from March 21, 1947, through July said it has made a total of 332 "ineligible determinations."

Of these, the board said, 102 persons have been fired for loyalty reasons. Seventy others were restored to duty after appeals, 148 are in the process of appealing or being removed and 12 cases have been returned to regional boards for further consideration.

All told, the board has received 10,009 cases, and loyalty boards have made decisions in 5450 of them.

South African Premier Hits News Coverage

Capetown, South Africa, Sept. 28 (U.P.)—Prime Minister Daniel Malan last night attacked coverage of his administration by the English press in South Africa and by foreign correspondents stationed there.

Opening the Cape province congress of his Nationalist party, Malan said that "this state of affairs will lead to what happened in two of the world's most democratic countries—Britain and Holland—a thorough investigation into the activities of the press."

white paper on China to support his case.

Not once did he refer to the Nationalists as a "Chinese" government, calling them repeatedly the "Kuomintang clique."

There was no sign that the Soviet Union is ready yet to contest the U. N. credentials of the Nationalists and move to give their seat to a delegation from the Communist government proclaimed by Mao Tse-tung at Peiping last week.

American Delegate Warren R. Austin kept silent throughout the steering committe debate, then raised his hand with the majority. No other Western power spoke.

Chinese Delegate Tingfu F. Tsiang opened the committee battle, accusing Russia of failing to honor its obligations under the China-Soviety treaty of 1945.

"This is not a case between my government and the Chinese Communists," he said. "It is a case between my government and the government of the Soviet Union."

Atlantic Union Urged By Patterson, Roberts

New York, Sept. 28 (U.P.)—Robert P. Patterson, former Secretary of War, said today the Atlantic Pact nations must form an Atlantic union for real security from the atom bomb.

Patterson and Owen J. Roberts, former Supreme Court justice, speaking to New York members of the Atlantic Union Committee, urged immediate passage of congressional resolutions authorizing President Truman to call a convention of Atlantic Pact nations to explore the possibility of forming such a union.

"The announcement that the Soviet Union has developed an atomic weapon doubles the urgency for unification of the defense plans and the defense forces of free nations," Patterson said.

Kirk Visits Stalingrad

Moscow, Sept. 28 (AP).—United States Ambassador Alan G. Kirk returned to Moscow from Stalingrad. It was his first trip outside Moscow since he arrived in the Soviet Union late in June.

Sinkiang Province Goes Over to Chinese Reds

Hongkong, Sept. 28 (U.P.)—The Red Chinese radio announced from Peiping tonight that the large northwest province of Sinkiang had deserted the Nationalists and gone over to the Communists.

The province, third to leave the Nationalist side in the last two weeks, is larger in area—705,962 square miles—than Texas, California, Montana and New Mexico combined.

The northern provinces of Suiyuan and Ninghsia previously defected to the Communists. Sinkiang, known as Chinese Turkestan, borders on Soviet Russia, Outer Mongolia, India and Afghanistan.

Canton reports said Nationalist troops defending the southern provinces of Kwangtung and Kwangsi were fighting a hand-to-hand battle against the Communists.

Fighting in the Amoy area northeast of Canton was reported to have been slowed down by a daylong rainfall.

The Red radio reported the Communist "peoples political consultative council" in Peiping had passeed an organic law for "a central government," indicating that establishment of a new Communist government was imminent.

Belgian Uranium Boss On Way Here for Talks

Brussels, Belgium, Sept. 28 (U.P.)—The boss of Belgium's African uranium properties left here today on his way to the United States, reportedly for high-level talks with American officials.

Edgar Sengiar, managing director of the mining union of Upper Katanga, is scheduled to sail from La Harve, France, Oct. 1 aboard the British liner Caronia.

The Upper Katanga Union operates the uranium mine at Shinkolobwe in the Belgian Congo, which produces an estimated 60 percent of all the uranium ore mined outside the Soviet sphere of influence.

Sir Hartley Shawcross Flies to Lake Success

London, Sept. 28 (U.P.)—Attorney General Sir Hartley Shawcross left by air for the United States tonight to attend the General Assembly of the United Nations.

He said he was "not surprised" that the Russians have the atomic bomb, but added that the "real weapon" of international communism is "the hope of economic collapse and the use of political infiltration."

Seminole Infection Outbreak Controlled

Clewiston, Fla., Sept. 28 (AP).—An outbreak of streptococcic infection among 21 Seminole Indian children and two grownups was reported under control today, thanks to the skill of a former U. S. Army doctor.

No new cases were reported last night and Dr. Albert B. Johnson said "everything is under control." He added he expected some would be discharged "in a day or two."

Senator Says Writings Point To Olds as Red

By the United Press

Senator Reed (R., Kans.) said yesterday testimony at a Senate Commerce subcommittee hearing indicated that Federal Power Commissioner Leland Olds "is a full-fledged, first-class Communist."

Olds

The subcommittee is considering Olds' reappointment to a third five-year term on the FPC.

Reed made his statement after Representative Lyle (D., Tex.) had placed in the record a series of articles Olds admitted writing, 20 years ago, for Federated Press, a labor news service. Lyle cited the articles as evidence Olds held radical views which made him unfit for a high Federal post.

Reed broke in to say that Lyle's testimony amounted to a charge that "here is a man who is a full-fledged, first-class Communist."

Olds, confronting with the documents, admitted they were "radical" and said he "probably" advocated public ownership of electric utilities at the time they were written, but has since changed his mind.

He told the committee he wrote the articles to "shock people" into changing over from the "irresponsible enterprise system of the early 20's" to something like the present system.

Federal Power Commissioners Thomas C. Buchanan and Claude L. Draper indorsed Olds' appointment as did representatives of the CIO United Auto Workers and the National Farmers Union.

Olds testified after Lyle attacked the appointment as "utterly unthinkable" and "devoid of merit and of justification."

Cites Progress Made

The FPC commissioner said tremendous progress had been made since 1932 in the public utility field and added that he believed the progress would continue "under present leadership."

Senator McFarland (D., Ariz.) said he was "shocked beyond words" at the disclosure and asked the subcommittee to "go into the matter thoroughly."

The attack on Olds got under way before he had time to read a 12,000-word statement in defense of his record. In it, he said he "rejected the approach of Karl Marx early in life because I felt the road to harmony must recognize spiritual values and that ambition for power was an unwholesome influence in human affairs."

"I still believe that," he added.

He said the FPC had tried "to get away from the laissez-faire regulation and make the exercise of regulatory authority an effective instrument of government."

Senator Capehart (R., Ind.) asked Olds whether his writings helped spread communism.

Olds said that, on the contrary, he thought they had helped to develop a "sense of social responsibility in the United States."

'Hedge and Dodge'

Chairman Johnson (D., Colo.) questioned Olds at length about the present split in views on Power Commission membership. He insisted at one point that Olds stop trying to "hedge and dodge" and say whether he thought the commission would be as active a regulatory body if he were not a member.

"I do not," Olds replied, "not to the extent that it would be if I were present."

Lyle previously had characterized Olds as "an advocate of public ownership" and a man who "loudly praised Lenin's system and foresaw its installation here."

The Congressman said Olds "attacked the church" and American schools, and had "ridiculed the very symbols of patriotism and loyalty such as the Fourth of July."

Tydings Confers With Ramadier

Paris, Sept. 28 (AP).—Senator Tydings (D., Md.), chairman of the Senate Armed Forces Committee, conferred today with French Defense Minister Paul Ramadier.

Tydings, on a survey of Atlantic Pact nations, arrived early today on what embassy sources described as a two-day inspection trip. Max Lejeune, Joannes Dupraz and Jean Moreau, Ramadier's assistants for Army, Navy and Air Force respectively, attended a luncheon for the Senator.

Tydings was accompanied by United States Ambassador David K. Bruce who will be the Senator's host at luncheon tomorrow in the embassy residence.

Douglas in Frankfurt

Frankfurt, Germany, Sept. 28 (U.P.). — American Ambassador to Britain Lewis Douglas arrived here today from Paris for talks with John J. McCloy, United States High Commissioner for Germany.

Pineapple Cargo

CIO Pickets Invade Dock In Oregon

The Dalles, Oreg., Sept. 28 (U.P.).—Two hundred CIO Longshore pickets, armed with clubs and rocks, smashed through a police line today and battered trucks loading Hawaiian pineapple from the dock.

Oregon State police were summoned to this Columbia River port as the pickets injured truck Clarence Rosales, 45, San Jose, Calif.

They dumped cases of pineapple off the trucks, cut hawsers securing the black-listed barge Honolulu and smashed windows and headlights on the trucks.

A few minutes earlier the longeshoremen had declared a strike against the port of The Dalles and tied up freight traffic on the port's union spur tracks.

At 6 a. m. today crews of townspeople, including cowhands and farmers in 10-gallon hats and Western boots, moved onto the dock and began unloading the $800,000 cargo of diced pineapple.

Three hours later 100 longshoremen from Portland arrived and set up a mass picket headquarters outside the port causeway.

The pineapple cargo was loaded in Hawaii, where longshoremen have been on strike five months, by nonunion dock workers. It arrived in The Dalles after longshoremen belonging to Harry Bridges' International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union refused to unload it at Seattle or Tacoma.

Buffalo Judge Tells Of Threat to Family

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 28 (U.P.).—Supreme Court Justice George H. Rowe, who set $123,000 bail for 23 CIO leaders of the Bell Aircrft strike, disclosed today that his family had been threatened twice.

The two threats were disclosed after Mrs. Rowe received a telephone call last night from an unidentified man.

"You'll get what you don't expect," a gruff voice told her.

Rowe was not at home and Mrs. Rowe notified police. When the justice returned, he said it was the second anonymous call threatening his family in the last three days.

Detroit, Sept. 28 (AP).—CIO United Auto Workers leaders reported tonight shortly before a threatened strike that a Ford Motor Co. walkout "still is a possibility."

A number of important issues "still have not been resolved," they said.

The report was made in telegrams to Ford local unions across the Nation as negotiators fought doggedly to settle the pension dispute involving 115,000 workers. The conferees had been in almost continuous sessions for more than 31 hours.

Local union heads were instructed to "stand by for another report between 12 and 1 a. m." (EST.

The UAW earlier today had told the local unions it would report to them on the status of negotiations as of 10 p. m.

Anote of pessimism leaked from the bargaining room when a company spokesman told reporters:

"Watever else you say, don't say it's settled."

Despite this comment, however, there still was high hope of a settlement shortly before or after midnight.

According to unofficial reports, the company and the CIO United Auto Workers had reached agreement on major points. Looking ahead was a union-imposed midnight deadline for settlement.

A threatened strike of 115,000 Ford workers hung in the balance.

The reported agreement on pensions would allow employes to retire at 65 on $100 monthly. The company would foot all the bills.

It was also reported by informants on both sides that the contract would run 30 months—unprecedented in the auto industry.

Since 3 p. m. Tuesday, 30 negotiators has been in conference battling for last-minute gains. By this afternoon, they were failing asleep at the broad table.

Observers believed the marathon session could only mean that settlement was at hand.

Additional reports were circulating that:

1. Retirement at 65 would be optional, but it would be required at 68. The $100 pension would include workers' Federal Social Security benefits.

2. One major improvement had been made in the company's present insurance plan under which workers and Ford share costs.

3. Provisions on production standards were incorporated in the proposed contract. These were the core of the Ford "speed-up" strike last May.

All heavy industry was watching. Ford settlement might possibly set a pattern for the entire country. Most immediate effect of a Ford agreement would be felt at the steel bargaining table in Pittsburgh. The CIO Steelworkers were certain to use gains at Ford as a weapon against Big Steel, which wants workers to share pension costs.

A pension plan at Ford would be the first in the auto industry.

Magnetic Eye Stops Autos At Crossings

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 28 (AP).—A device to eliminate railroad grade crossing accidents may be on the market soon.

Three Pennsylvania inventors demonstrated the gadget yesterday to State, railroad and insurance officials.

The device would register the approach of a train, stop the auto, turn off its motor, and keep it halted until the train passes.

The device is the result of 19 years of puttering around a hobby shop by Alfred M. Peiffer, 41; Harold C. Roeder, 41; and Oscar Funk, 57.

Magnetic coils in the roadbeds of highways approaching grade crossings would be tied in with the crossing's blinker signal system.

A magnetic impulse would be set off by the coils as a train approaches, relaying the signal to a magnetic eye in the auto. The eye mechanism would stop the car.

The device could be installed in all motor vehicles—for about $12 to $15 each.

Rubinstein's Trial Put Off to December

New York, Sept. 28 (U.P.).—The trial of Serge Rubinstein, charged with stock rigging that allegedly brought him three million dollars while dodging the draft, was adjourned today until December 5 when Judge Alfred C. Coxe will fix the trial date.

Rubinstein was released from prison April 25 after serving a sentence for draft evasion. The charge pending against him now specifically alleges violation of Security and Exchange Commission regulations.

Arlington Surveys School Bus Needs

A survey of Arlington school trasportation needs and costs was begun yesterday by Raymond L. Wimbish, director of transportation for the Virginia State Board of Education.

Arlington School Supt. William A. Early said the survey, to determine the number of buses necessary to provide county-owned and operated bus service to the schools, should be finished October 15. School transportation now is on a franchise basis.

Steelworkers Reject Offer

panies have contended that inasmuch as the fact-finders' recommendations were not binding, they did not have to accept them on an as-is basis, but rather as a basis for further bargaining.

Company Plan Given

Benjamin F. Fairless, president of United States Steel, pointed out yesterday that his company's offer met the recommendations of the fact-finders so far as the 10 cents was concerned, but that the company felt the program should be "on a contributory basis, as is true of Federal social security and of pensions for Federal Government employes . . ."

U. S. Steel offered to put up for its employes a premium worth about $8 a month gross, $5.70 a month net, for social insurance; with single employes contributing about $2 a month and employes with dependents about $3 a month.

As proposed by the company, U. S. Steel social-insurance benefits would include term life insurance before retirement in the amount of normal annual earnings; $1000 life insurance after retirement; accident and sickness insurance of $26 a week for 26 weeks; hospital expenses for employes and dependents for 31 days at a fixed rate a day, and $160 maximum surgical expenses.

Contingent on Study

As to the pension fund, U. S. Steel offered to put up 6 cents, but only after a joint study to be concluded by March 1, 1950, as recommended by the fact-finders. The company made its offer contingent on a contract to extend until April 30, 1951, and a contribution from employes to the fund.

Murray's statement noted the union has extended its strike deadline three times, a total of 77 days. Without saying so directly, he indicated the union would agree to no further extensions.

The CIO leader charged U. S. Steel and other companies were not engaging in genuine collective bargaining, but were "determined to bring about a nation-wide strike on the issue of contributory pensions and social insurance."

This, Murray declared, is a "false issue deliberately raised by the industry, a cloak to conceal its determination to force strike action on the union and on the country."

'Will Be Settled'

He said a strike still can be averted, but only if U. S. Steel and other producers accept the fact-finders' recommendations in full—including the principles of non-contributory social insurance and pension programs.

Conciliation Director Ching said here he was sending his staff mediators to the separate steel negotiations, rather than bringing the disputants here, in order to accelerate negotiations. Ching added:

"The primary responsibility for averting a shutdown in steel manufacture rests not on the Government or its mediators, but, rather, on the shoulders of the parties themselves.

"The current disputes will be settled sometime—with or without a stoppage. Self-interest and the public interest requires that the parties, without delay, realistically reappraise their respective positions and seek a settlement before stoppages and shutdowns occur.

"No one ever won a war; no one ever won a strike or lockout."

Ship Lines Agree To Extend Contract

New York, Sept. 28 (AP).—Shipping companies threatened with an East Coast longshoremen's strike today agreed to a 30-day extension of a contract due to expire Friday midnight.

Negotiators for the Atlantic Coast district of the AFL International Longshoremen's Association yesterday consented to the extension at the request of the Federal Mediation Service.

Undertaker Writes Certificate, Hangs Self

New York, Sept. 28 (U.P.).—An undertaker made out his own death certificate today and then hanged himself.

Hermann Moskowitz, 60, was found dead in the basement of a Brooklyn mortuary.

He had filled out the entire certificate of death except for one line—the one used by the medical examiner to state the cause of death.

Shots Mark Return Of Defiant Miners

Bellefonte, Pa., Sept. 28 (AP).—Gunfire echoed in the Nation's coal fields today as hundreds of nonunion miners went back to the pits in defiance of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers.

One miner was reported killed in Alabama. Armed guards protected mine property and employes. Police patrolled some highways in Pennsylvania and other States.

Bullets were fired at 13 trucks in Centre County, Pa.

At Birmingham, Ala., six brothers who had voted to "defend our right to make a living" exchanged rifle fire with a group near their small nonunion mine.

Gene Peskitt, son of one miner, said he was acting as a lookout at the mine, 20 miles west of Birmingham, when he saw a group approaching through the woods. He fired his rifle as a warning. Answering shots came from the woods. Deputy Sheriff Carl Black later said officers were seeking the body of one man believed killed.

'Prepared for Anything'

Police officers said tonight they're "prepared for anything" in the coal fields.

Meanwhile, the 10-day walkout of 480,000 soft and hard coal miners began digging deeply into coal reserves.

At Harlan, Ky., in the heart of one of the biggest coal producing regions of the world, dealers said they have little coal to sell, and prospects are slim for any more until the work stoppage ends.

The situation in Harlan apparently is more severe than in other places, but there was little doubt coal stocks were dwindling rapidly.

Shooting Laid to Pickets

The shooting episode in Centre County happened late yesterday. It wasn't reported until today, when Sheriff Martin L. Kauffman told Gov. James H. Duff about it, and asked for State police help.

"There's no question that pickets threw those stones and fired those rifles," Kauffman told a reporter.

Kauffman said two bullets were fired at the 13-truck convoy in an isolated region on Snowshoe Mountain. One bullet blew out a tire.

Stones hurled at the trucks smashed windshields in seven. Headlights were knocked out.

A new series of conferences between the UMW and the Southern operators was set for Bluefield, W. Va., today.

Lewis to Confer

Lewis is expected to go to White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Thursday to resume talks with Northern and Western operators.

The Southern coal mines produce 97 million tons annually. The Northerners and Westerners turn out 300 million tons.

Many industry leaders were reported marking time until there were definite indications of a change in the steel dispute.

An occasional truck made the Snowshoe Mountain trip today.

"Things were quiet," Kauffman said, "But we're prepared for anything.

"You can never tell about these things. We have to be ready."

The sheriff said additional State police are on call for an emergency.

One man, America Crestanon, 28, Clarence, Pa., was arrested and charged with riot, unlawful assembly and riotous destruction of property.

He was the thirteenth picket to be arrested in the outbreak.

A spokesman for operators in Clearfield County, which adjoins Centre County, said 250 more miners reported to the pits, raising the total to 1350 in about 40 mines.

"More pits are opening all the time," the spokesman said.

The walkout started September 19 with the miners shouting: "No pension no work." They protested the end of welfare and pension benefits, ordered ended by Lewis after some Southern coal operators refused to make payments.

Hard coal miners, numbering 80,000, quit in a sympathy walkout.

Mary Garden Back In U. S. for Her Tour

Hoboken, N. J., Sept. 28 (AP).—Mary Garden returned to the United States today at the age of 72.

Miss Garden, whose flashing operatic career faded in 1931, has been living in retirement in Scotland for 15 years. But she indicated retirement did not mean repose to her.

Her immediate plans?

A lecture tour sponsored by the National Arts Foundation begins October 2 in Washington. She will discuss music.

She will not sing again.

Bricklaying Machine Test Set for Today

Montgomery, Ala., Sept. 28 (U.P.).—A bricklaying machine that its inventor says can save 100 million dollars a year in building costs will be tested here Thursday before an array of officials.

Representatives of the Government, labor, brick manufacturers, contractors and architects will attend the demonstration.

Walter C. Andrews, secretary of the AFL Bricklayers Union in Atlanta predicted the machine won't work effectively.

Inventor Paul Sommers of Montgomery said his machine hand-operated by one man, can lay between 2000 and 3000 bricks in an eight-hour day. He also claimed:

1. Builders can save up to 36 cents a square foot in brick wall construction with the machine.
2. Any reasonable use of the machine can cut construction costs in the Nation 100 million dollars a year.
3. Brick construction demand will reach new high volume.

Andrews countered that a single man working on a straight and level wall without windows or doors also can lay between 2000 and 3000 bricks a day.

"I don't think it's probable that there is a machine which would save man labor," Andrews added. "I haven't seen one that would work and I've been in this business for 50 years."

Sommers said his machine would go into production in several sizes

Built-in guides and spirit levels keep the masonry lined up and in plumb. A master scoop provides enough mortar to set eight bricks in one operation.

Businessmen Urged To Take U. S. Jobs

New York, Sept. 28 (AP).—Gen. Omar Bradley urged business and industrial leaders today to enter Government service because the Government "needs our best men 24 hours a day, every day."

The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff sounded his appeal at a meeting of the National Security Industrial Association. He said that "with the trying years ahead, we need now more than ever outstanding men in public circles."

He added in a prepared speech:

"If you will help run our Government in the American way, then there will never be danger of our Government running along the wrong way.

"So long as the American taxpayer cannot afford to pay sufficient salaries to attract, in competition with business and industry, the men Government needs, the able citizens must make up in patriotic devotion the difference between the Government's executive pay scale and their salaries in business. I believe that many more men could accept Government positions for two years or more, and contribute to the better operation of America.

"And for those who do not accept a definite position I appeal to you to take advisory posts for short periods of time whenever called upon."

President Truman has complained repeatedly that he has been unable to get businessmen to take Federal posts because of the low pay.

House Votes 885,000 Raises

ers, firemen and policemen from the bill.

Chairman Murray went down the line enthusiastically for his bill. He said pointedly his committee had not been harassed in its study of the classified bill. It was a plain reference to the manner in which the postal pay bill was handled, to which Murray objected strenuously.

Murray explained his bill didn't alter the efficiency rating system, as the Senate bill did. He admitted the rating system was cumbersome and unwieldy, and said his committee is waiting for the Civil Service Commission to recommend changes in it.

Rees based his motion to reduce the proposed ceiling from $15,000 to $12,000 on a bipartisan move in the Senate to cut back the executive pay bill. A similar amendment is expected to be offered today to the Senate's classified bill, which differs in some respects from the House bill.

Both the Senate and House bills would merge the 31 different CAF (clerical, administrative and fiscal), P (professional) and SP (subprofessional) grades into a single GS (General Schedule) of 18 grades. The existing salary rates as compared with the House and Senate proposals are as follows:

GS-1 (to be composed of SP-1 and 2 and CAF-1) now ranging from $2020 minimum to $2423.04 maximum). The House bill proposes a $2186 to $2666 range with six $80 step-ups in between. The Senate bill would range from $2100 to $2580 with six $80 steps.

GS-2 (present CAF-2 and SP-3, ranging from $2284 to $2724). The House bill proposes $2384 to $2864; the Senate, $2350 to $2830 each with six $80 step-ups.

GS-3 (present CAF-3 and SP-4, $2498.28 to $2949.72). The House and Senate bills propose $2600 to $3080, each with six $80 step-ups.

GS-4 (present CAF-4 and SP-5, $2724 to $3175.44). The House bill, $2824 to $3304; the Senate, $2900 to $3380, each with six $80 step-ups.

GS-5 (present CAF-5, SP-6, and P-1, $2974.80 to $3727.20.) The House—$3075 to $3725; the Senate—$3100 to $3850, each with six $125 step-ups.

GS-6 (present CAF-6 and SP-7, $3351 to $4103.40.) The House—$3451 to $4201; the Senate—$3475 to $4225, each with six $125 step-ups.

GS-7 (present P-2, SP-8, and CAF-7, $3727.20 to $4479.60.) The House—$3827 to $4577; the Senate—$3850 to $4600, each with six $125 step-ups.

GS-8 (present CAF-8, $4103.40 to $4855.80). The House—$4200 to $4950; the Senate—$4225 to $4975, each with six $125 step-ups.

GS-9 (present CAF-9 and P-3, $4479.60 to $5232). The House—$4600 to $5350; the Senate—identical, each with six $125 step-ups.

GS-10 (present CAF-10, $4855.80 to $5608.20). The House—$5000 to $5750; the Senate—$4975 to $5725, each with six $125 step-ups.

GS-11 (present CAF-11 and P-4, $5232 to $6235.20). The House—$5400 to $6400, with five $200 step-ups; the Senate—identical, but with four $250 step-ups.

GS-12 (present CAF-12 & P-5, $6235.20 to $7192.80.) The House and Senate bills would make it from $6400 to $7400, but the House would have five $200 step-ups, the Senate four of $250.

GS-13 (present CAF-13 & P-6, $7432.20 to $8389.80.) House and Senate bills—$7600 to $8600, the House with five $200 step-ups, the Senate four of $250.

GS-14 (present P-7 & CAF-14, $8509.50 to $9706.50) Both bills—$8800 to $9800, the House with five step-ups of $200 each, the Senate four of $250.

GS-15 (present CAF-15 and P-8, $10,305 to $10,330). Both bills $10,000 to $11,000, the House with four $250 step-ups, the Senate two of $500.

GS-16 would be a new grade of from $11,500 to $12,500 in both bills. Again, the House would have four $250 steps, the Senate two of $500.

GS-17, another new grade, and both bills agree it should be from $13,000 to $14,000. The House bill has four $250 steps, the Senate two $500 steps.

GS-18, the top new grade, would be a flat $15,000, new maximum for classified employes. Only the President would have authority to assign people to that grade. The Civil Service Commission would have to give its prior approval before the employes could be reclassified to GS grades 15, 16 and 17.

Truman Gets Major Role in Jolson Story

By The Associated Press

"Mammy" singer Al Jolson quoted President Truman as saying yesterday that he might run again on the slogan, "I need the job."

Visiting old scenes in his home town of Washington, Jolson said he popped the question to the President in a White House call:

"Do you think you might run again?"

He said Mr. Truman quipped back:

"I don't know whether they will want me again. Maybe I can use the job and can run on the slogan 'I need the job.'"

The President recalled seeing Jolson in a minstrel show at the Grand Opera House in Kansas City in 1908 or 1909.

That took the conversation around to Jolson's age. He said the President knew what it was.

"I'll kiss 62 next May," Jolson told reporters.

He said that he and the President agreed he shouldn't retire, and that the President volunteered the view:

"If you quit, it'll kill you."

Jolson related that when he sang "I'm Just Wild About Harry" on the radio during the campaign, "I got congratulations from Democrats all over the country.

"I didn't think of the connection with the campaign at the time but got a reputation as a prophet."

Another Jolson story: He was assigned to the room reserved for the President at the Key West (Fla.) Naval Station when he visited there in 1946 for the polio drive, but had a restless night.

"It was a room with twin beds," Jolson explained. "I kept jumping from bed to bed, but never did figure out which one President Truman sleeps on."

Officials Greet Truman Party At St. Louis

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

St. Louis, Sept. 28.—President Truman arrived here tonight in an Air Force plane after a flight of 3 hours and 11 minutes from Washington. He is to take part in installation of officers of the Missouri Grand Lodge of Masons Thursday.

Mr. Truman was greeted at Lambert Field by Mayor Joseph M. Darst, Collector of Internal Revenue James P. Finnegan, Postmaster Bernard Dickman and other St. Louis officials.

Mrs. Frank Clifford was on hand to meet her son, Clark M. Clifford, counsel to the President. She was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Albert Kurrus and her granddaughter, 14-year-old Georgia Kurrus.

"Missouri Waltz" Played

A Shriners band, stationed outside the Sheraton Hotel, played "Missouri Waltz" as Mr. Truman and members of his party arrived there to spend the night.

Mr. Truman, a thirty-third degree Mason, will present the incoming grand master, James Braford, of St. Louis, with a gavel made from the famous Van Buren elm at Plainfield, Ind. This tree, according to legend, sheltered Martin Van Buren, Democratic candidate for President, when he campaigned for the Presidency in 1836.

Vice President Alben Barkley is scheduled to arrive here Thursday morning for a speech before the St. Louis Rotary Club. He is expected to see Mrs. Carleton Hadley, 68-year-old widow. Romantic rumors concerning the "veep" and Mrs. Hadley have been afloat for several weeks.

Formerly Police Officer

The President will make one of his off-the-cuff talks at 10:30 p. m. (EST) in Kansas City Thursday night at a testimonial dinner for William M. (Bill) Boyle, new Democratic national chairman.

Virtually the entire Cabinet and top-ranking Democratic national leaders will attend the celebration in Kansas City's big Civic Auditorium. Boyle formerly was a police official there.

Although Mr. Truman has indicated he will stay out of the Democratic primary in Missouri—as elsewhere—he has made it clear he expects to take an active part in the congressional elections campaign in November, 1950.

The Democrats, with President Truman leading the ticket, swept Missouri in 1948, with only Representative Dewey Short, a Republican, returned to Congress. Their drive next year will be to defeat Short and also Senator Donnell (R., Mo.), who will be up for reelection. The governorship is not at stake.

The Masonic ceremony is the only scheduled engagement on the President's St. Louis stop-over.

The President is due to take off at 2 p. m. (E. S. T.) Thursday for an hour's flight to Kansas City. From there he will drive to his home in Independence before returning for the Boyle dinner.

The President is being accompanied by his three secretaries; his three aides; Brig. Gen. Wallace Graham, presidential physician; Administrative Assistants Donald Dawson and David Niles; Legislative Assistants Joseph Feeney and Charles Maylon; David Lloyd, an assistant to Administrative Assistant Charles Murphy; Representative Bowling (D., Mo.), Miss Rose Conway, the President's personal stenographer, and Secret Service agents.

Mr. Truman is due to fly back to Washington Friday afternoon. That night he is to make a Nationwide broadcast on behalf of the Community Chest campaign.

Mr. Truman's own plane, the Independence, is undergoing a checkup at the Douglas Plant in California. So he flew to St. Louis this evening in an Air Force Constellation, The Dew Drop.

Mother Asks Sympathy For Girl in Mercy Death

Stamford, Conn., Sept. 28. (UP) Carol Paight, 20-year-old college student who killed her father to save him from a lingering death by cancer, knew the "terrible pain" of the disease from watching two other members of her family die of it, her mother revealed today.

Mrs. Mary Nolan Paight pleaded for "Sympathy and understanding" for her daughter. Miss Paight has been under sedatives and a police guard at Stamford Hospital since she shot her father, Police Sergt. Carl Paight with his service revolver Friday night.

Senate in Stormy Night Session Cuts Executive Pay Raises

the Federal Reserve Board, raising these salaries to cabinet grades.

Maybank proposed to pay the Chairman of the Board of Governors $22,500 and the other governors $20,000. This amendment was defeated by a voice vote, following a warning by Sen. Ernest A. McFarland (D., Ariz.) a leader of the compromise bloc that he would move to recommit the bill if it was "loaded down with amendments."

Likewise defeated was an attempt by Sen. Sparkman to raise salaries of FDIC directors to the $20,000 level.

One last-minute exception was made for the Deputy Secretary of Defense, the post now held by Stephen Early, former aide to the late President Roosevelt. Salary for this job was set at $20,000.

Partisan exchanges and many quorum calls marked the angry night session as the Senate broke away from its leadership to continue past midnight in unbroken consideration of the bill.

Several times Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) tried to get a unanimous consent agreement to recess the Senate and vote finally on the bill and all amendments today.

Republican senators, complaining that Lucas had forced them to cancel engagements when he ordered a night session and demanded that he go through with it, blocked each request.

In an unsuccessful effort to stem the bolt to the lower pay scales, Sen. Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.) proposed Senators raise Congressional salaries to $22,500. Flanders said he wanted to "lift the manhole cover" so Senators would be willing to vote key Government positions salaries commensurate with their jobs.

Cain in Protest

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) proposed a similar amendment in what he termed a "protest" against the executive pay raises.

But the bipartisan bloc in charge of the compromise succeeded, for the time being, at least, in bypassing such changes.

In vain, Senator Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.) joined Flanders in urging that Senators follow the Administration's basic pay recommendations and keep all Government pay bills "in relationship."

O'Conor complained the compromise would establish "descrepancies quite as glaring as any now existing."

Instead of setting an orderly pay pattern, O'Conor said the compromise invited "a continuing scramble among agency and department heads and subordinate officials in future Congresses for picemeal legislation."

Cain argued there would be "too much spread" between the pay of Government department heads and the lawmakers if the bill passed.

But Senator Long (D., La.) told the Senate that the Federal Government must be ready to spend more for salaries if it wants to keep highly qualified men from quitting the Government or refusing to enter Federal service.

Long said top-bracket officials affected by the measure have not had a general pay raise since 1925.

Comparative Tests Urged In Color TV

By The Associated Press

Radio interests which believe that color television is not yet ripe for general use today urged the Government to study closely the color quality now available.

The Allen B. Du Mont Laboratories of Passaic, N. J., asked the Federal Communications Commission to make an official side-by-side comparison of picture reception over the proposed color systems and over the present black-and-white operations.

Du Mont contends that color video is still in the development stage. In similar vein, President Justin Miller of the National Association of Broadcasters forecast at DesMoines, Iowa, earlier this week that color television for the general public is "at least five years away."

The FCC, now holding hearings on additional television channels and possible introduction of color, is arranging to see official demonstations of color systems between October 6 and 10.

Color video will be shown by Columbia Broadcasting System, Radio Corporation of America, Color Television, Inc., of San Francisco and any others who may be ready with laboratory models.

Du Mont's proposal is that the commission also arrange for simultaneous viewing of the same programs, in the same room, of reception on sets especially built for color, on black-and-white sets which have been "converted" for color and on ordinary black and white receivers.

FCC also heard testimony from David G. Smith, vice president of Philco Corp., that color can be provided only by sacrificing some sharpness of image. "You have to make a choice between color and definition," he commented.

"You can't have everything," he said.

Smith expressed the view that color, while inviting for some types of programs, is not to be preferred for others, for instance, he said, take baseball.

"In some of the systems now proposed," he said, "you will not be able to follow the flight of the ball in color as you do in black-and white reception.

"As for myself, I would rather see where the ball is going than to know what color clothes the umpire is wearing."

He conceded that color is superior "if the scene involves bright flowers or beautiful women."

Smith was closely cross-examined by Commissioners Robert F. Jones and Frieda Hennock, who have indicated a belief that the industry may not be so anxious to see color introduced into television now. At one point, Miss Hennock bluntly asked Smith:

"Isn't it true that the industry does not want color television?"

"That is not true," Smith replied.

He explained, however, that television is still in the process of bringing the black-and-white reception to a higher degree of perfection as to sharpness of picture.

His company is among those which have been urging further experiments on color before it is authorized for general commercial use.

Watchmaker Is Witness in Plane Deaths

Quebec, Sept. 28 (AP).—A high city police official said today that a half-paralyzed watchmaker, who was a wizard with his hands, unwittingly helped to make the bomb that sent 23 airline passengers to their death September 9.

He was identified by the official as 47-year-old Genereux Ruest, a brother of Mrs. Arthur Pitre, key witness in the case.

Paralyzed from the waist down but said to be an expert watchmaker, Ruest will not be charged in connection with the "love-plot" bomb, the official said.

The official said Ruest will be a Crown witness in the trial against J. Albert Guay, charged with murdering his 28-year-old wife, Rita, a passenger on the plane.

The official said Ruest, who learned to work for hours on tiny and complicated devices while he spent years in an invalid's bed, did not know for what he was making the time mechanism.

Mrs. Pitre, a friend of the accused Guay, was arraigned in court today on a charge of attempted suicide. Her preliminary hearing was set for October 6.

The case broke after Mrs. Pitre took an overdose of sleeping tablets that left her unconscious for three days. When she woke up on September 23 police questioned her and Guay's arrest followed a few hours later.

Mrs. Pitre was said to have admitted she had carried a parcel to the plane just before it took off on its fatal flight but thought the parcel contained a statue.

Guay's preliminary hearing is set for October 4.

Living Costs Up; Sales Tax Contributes

Prices have gone up a little recently, the Bureau of Labor Standards reported yesterday, with the sales tax mainly responsible for the increase in certain items.

In general, Washingtonians put out 0.4 percent more for goods and services in the three months ending August 15, BLS said.

The only cost decreases during that time were in apparel and house furnishings. Even in these two groups, the sales tax "had a retarding effect on the decreases," according to the bureau's consumer price index.

Food prices here went up 1.5 percent between mid-July and mid-August. They were still 5 percent lower than August 15, 1948, but 40 percent above June, 1946.

The higher food cost, BLS noted, was due to increases of 8 percent for eggs, 4.3 percent for dairy products, and 1.5 percent for meats, poultry, and fish. Milk, was up about 5 percent, both in stores and delivered.

According to the consumer price index, the sales tax was largely responsible for the rise in the miscellaneous and fuels groups.

Miscellaneous goods and services reflected a 0.4 per cent jump. "Higher prices for cigarettes, tooth pastes, face powder, auto insurance and motor oil more than offset reductions in auto tires and repairs and toilet soap," it was reported.

Fuel, electricity and refrigeration costs were up 2.2 percent, and other fuels showed a 3.8 percent hike.

Washington's cost of living, however, remained slightly below the Nation's average, BLS said. The mid-August index here as of mid-August was 166 percent of the 1935-39 average. Nationally, the index was 168.8 percent of the same average.

Subdivision Developer Bound To Grand Jury in Fraud Case

Richard S. Lusk, developer of Fairfax County's Woodlawn Manor subdivision, yesterday was ordered held for grand jury action on a charge of larceny by embezzlement.

Lusk, head of Veterans Housing Corp., which is promoting the subdivision, was arrested September 16 on a warrant sworn to by Channing L. Pace of 3100 S. Hill st., Arlington. The warrant charged that Pace deposited money with Lusk for a home he never received.

At a preliminary hearing in Fairfax Trial Justice Court yesterday, Pace testified he gave Lusk a total of $3000 as down payment for a three-bedroom house. The money, he said, was accepted, but the house never has been completed.

Pace said he signed a contract in May, 1947, for a house in the subdivision, near Mount Vernon, and handed over a check for $1225 to Lusk as down payment. A short time later he gave the builder another $115, he testified, for switching to a three-bedroom house.

The contract specified, Pace said, that the house was to be available in 90 working days.

When nothing was done about building the house, Pace testified, he arranged, in January, 1948, to contract for a house already begun. This entailed an additional deposit of $1660, he said. Walls and roof of this house were put up soon after, but the house has never been finished, according to his testimony.

Pace, an examiner in the United States Patent Office, said Lush told him the $1660 payment would be used to repay the deposit made by the person who originally contracted for the house.

In court, however, a letter was introduced to show that the money had gone to pay off some of the corporation's creditors, but not to the person whom Lusk designated. Other evidence indicated that person was repaid through sale of part of the corporation's land holdings.

Trial Justice Harry L. Carrico ordered Lusk, a former Army major who lives in one of the subdivision homes, held for grand jury action. Lusk, free in $3000 bond, did not testify.

Woodlawn Manor is on tract of more than 300 acres between Mount Vernon and Route 1. Development was started about three years ago. Some two dozen or more brick homes have been built.

Bogey Says It Isn't True

guy" admitted there had been "a lot of sound and fury" last Saturday night when he and playboy friend Bill Seeman introduced two 3-foot-high toy Pandas as their "girl friends" and even more when he rescued his panda from abduction.

But he denied he had slugged Fashion Model Robin Roberts; pushed around society girl Peggy Rabe, daughter of Banker William G. Rabe; thrown any plates; been a target for flying crockery or even that he and the pandas had been "bounced" from the night club.

'Wife Had Some Sense'

"It all seemed like a fine idea when it started," Bogey said today.

He said he, his wife Lauren "Baby" Bacall, Seeman and other friends had spent the evening at the Stork Club.

"My wife had some sense and went home to bed," he said. "But Mr. Seeman and myself went on to make it a stag party. It seemed like a good idea to us to buy a couple of those huge pandas as a present for my son, and it seemed like a very good idea to take them to El Morocco for a nightcap.

"Mr. Seeman and myself were sitting perfectly quiet around a table for four at about 3:45 a. m. when some Jane I never saw before tried to steal one of the pandas on a bet or something."

"I couldn't let that happen, could I?" Bogart snapped.

"So, I wrestled the panda away from the girl. I guess she did fall down. But those pandas were huge, almost as big as she was, and she must have gotten a little top-heavy. Anyway, she looked as if she'd been drinking too many Coca Colas."

Bogart denied reports that Johnny Jelke, Miss Rabe's escort, took offense when Bogart dealt similar summary justice to her when she tried to steal the other panda.

"There was no slugging and nobody got hurt," he said.

"Anyway, Mr. Seeman and myself and our two pandas left the club under our own steam. My wife and I have those pandas at our hotel now. Of course they're twice as big as my son, but he'll grow up to them."

Told that El Morocco had dismissed the incident and said Bogart would not be banned from the night club, Bogart roared:

"What? I'm not banned? That's an outrage!"

459-Pound Man Loses 58 of Them In Rare Operation

Madison, Wis., Sept. 28 (U.P.).—A 459-pound man had 58 pounds of fat cut away in a rare operation and was "doing fine" today, doctors reported.

Dr. James A. Jackson, chief surgeon at Methodist Hospital, said the fatty tissue was cut from the abdomen of Albert W. Bartels, 45, of Rock Falls, Ill., in a two-hour operation.

Jackson said Bartels once weighed 700 pounds but had reduced to 459 pounds before the operation. He said the flesh was removed to enable Bartels to "get around."

A PUBLIC STATEMENT ABOUT TRUCKS:

Propagandists are attacking the trucking industry—but their real target is YOU!

In this country today are enormous transportation industries.

One, you know a good deal about—the railroads, which employ some 1,327,000 people.

Another is the trucking industry—next to agriculture the largest direct employer in America . . . giving jobs to 5,014,000 persons located in every city, town, village and hamlet in the United States.

Does that surprise you? No wonder—for the trucking industry is literally, even today, the "business nobody knows."

Trucking service has grown so great, so swiftly in the past 25 years, that it staggers the imagination. Even today—with everything you eat, wear, use or buy coming all or part of its way to you by truck—the average man or woman finds this enormous growth impossible to comprehend. But far more incomprehensible to the public, even today, is what the trucking industry means to you and your family, to America, and to the American way of life.

* * * *

In America today, raw and finished goods come pouring through the throbbing arteries of commerce in a never-ending flood.

Trains, ships, planes—and in certain cases pipelines—transport these goods, in large masses, between the great loading and unloading centers of the country. Trucks do that too.

But it's the trucks and only the trucks which deliver these masses of goods in large and small spot-loads; fan them out every day, every hour, to hundreds of thousands of grocery, drug, department and every type of stores in every American community, and thousands of factories big and small.

—So that these goods, in turn, can be picked up and delivered, also by trucks, to America's 148 million men, women and children in America's 45 million homes.

If it were not for America's 7 million trucks and their 5 million direct employees—who draw every 12th pay-check issued in the United States—you would have to carry home, on foot or in your car, everything you buy, eat, use or wear.

There are no railroad sidings, landing fields or docks that service your back door.

* * * * *

But above and beyond even this, the direct economic significance of the trucks is simply colossal.

—More than 25,000 U. S. communities with many millions of men, women and children, plus ALL of America's farms, not serviced by any other form of overland transportation, get everything they eat, wear, use or buy by trucks alone.

—In a single year the trucks use an estimated 7,800,000,000 gallons of gasoline; 533,000,000 quarts of motor oil; 7,900,000 gallons of anti-freeze; and this year will buy and put to use 1,100,000 new trucks and 50,000 new trailers.

—These trucks and trailers will be fabricated from an estimated 87,580,000 pounds of copper; 1,732,000 tons of steel; 93,000 tons of iron; 118,300,000 board feet of lumber; 6,150,000 pounds of glycerine; 95,000 bales of cotton; 64,800,000 pounds of paint and thinner; 15,180,000 pounds of aluminum; 54,000 tons of lead; 24,000,000 square feet of glass; 6,000,000 pounds of plastics; 109,000 long tons of rubber and 6,800,000 pounds of tin.

—Nearly one-third of all trucks are owned by farmers, who depend on trucking to get their produce to market, and thus to you.

—Trucks employ over 3½ times more people than all the railroads in America combined

So if it were not for the trucking industry's 7 million trucks and its 5,014,000 people directly employed, everything you eat, wear, use or buy would either cost you more—would be obtainable only at great inconvenience to you and your family—or would not be available at any price

Yes, propagandists are attacking the trucking industry.

They are doing so because of special interests of their own.

But make no mistake about it—their real target is YOU.

* * * * *

Now in "attacking the trucking industry," these propagandists are making some very extravagant claims.

But "claims" is all they are. The straight facts disprove them. For example:

The propagandists are claiming that the trucks "crack up the highways." THE ACTUAL EVIDENCE REGARDING HIGHWAY DAMAGE REVEALS THAT WEATHER—NOT THE TRUCKS, BUSSES NOR PASSENGER CARS NOR EVEN YEARS AND YEARS OF USE—IS THE MOST DAMAGING HIGHWAY WRECKER OF OUR TIME. COLD—HEAT—FROST—SOAKING RAINS—QUICK CHANGES IN TEMPERATURE—THESE ARE THE ENEMIES OF HIGHWAYS. HIGHWAY ENGINEERS, TESTIFYING AT PUBLIC HEARINGS, HAVE STAKED THEIR PROFESSIONAL REPUTATIONS SAYING SO.

The propagandists are claiming that the trucking industry does not pay enough taxes; that it "uses the highways free"; that it's "subsidized." SUBSIDIZED? SUBSIDIZED BY WHOM? TODAY AND FOR YEARS PAST, HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF TRUCKS AND TRACTOR-TRAILER COMBINATIONS YOU SEE ARE ASSESSED ALL THE WAY FROM $1000 to $3000 AND MORE EACH, PER YEAR, IN SPECIAL HIGHWAY USE TAXES FOR THE RIGHT TO RUN OVER THE ROADS. DOES THAT SOUND LIKE SUBSIDY? TRUCKS PAY BETTER THAN 32% OF ALL HIGHWAY USE TAXES. How much in dollars? Last year $718,563,000 in direct use taxes alone. And also over $370,000,000 of Federal excise taxes assessed against trucks for gasoline, oil, tires, tubes, parts and the like, not counted in the 32%, for a total of $1,089,000,000. Plus real estate, income and every other form of general taxation. That's what our "free" use of the highways costs.

IF THE TRUCKS ARE "SUBSIDIZED" SO IS YOUR CAR! Here's how: An official and complete Government study—the only one of its kind—showed that both passenger cars and trucks more than paid their way on the highways. In this study part of the cost of streets and highways was held to be the responsibility of all taxpayers.

Only by juggling these facts, can the propagandists "discover" that the trucks are "subsidized".

But what these propagandists don't tell you is that by false reasoning, they also claim that YOU TOO ARE NOT PAYING YOUR WAY! AND THAT YOUR CAR TAXES TOO, SHOULD BE INCREASED.

How do you like that?

* * * *

No wonder we say that the real target of the propagandists is not actually the trucking industry at all—but YOU . . . any way you figure it.

It seems to us that these are facts which you should weigh, against the claims the propagandists are now making.

King Blesses Milford Haven In Plan to Wed D. C. Divorcee

Associated Press Radiophoto.

BRITON AND AMERICAN BRIDE-TO-BE—David M. Mountbatten, the Marquess of Milford Haven, and Romaine Simpson, Washington divorcee, stroll through Hyde Park in London yesterday. Their engagement to marry in Washington in November was approved by King George

Royal Salesman Of Heaters Presents Fiancee to Press

London, Sept. 28 (U.P.) — King George VI was disclosed tonight to have given his blessing to the engagement of the Marquess of Milford Haven, Britain's most eligible bachelor, to Mrs. Romaine Simpson, Washington (D. C.) divorcee.

Press Agent Frank Shaw, who yesterday issued a Hollywood-type press release announcing the young nobleman's engagement, said Milford Haven wrote the King informing him of his intentions and that the King sent back his "best wishes" late today.

(At Cannes, France, the Marchioness of Milford Haven said that she "approved entirely" of her son's engagement to Mrs. Simpson. ("She's a charming woman," the Marchioness said of the American beauty.)

Earlier today, the marquess held a press conference at the Claridge's Hotel, his fiance by his side. He said that the King had not yet extended his congratulations, and perhaps had not had time to reply to his letter.

Courteous to King

Milford Haven said he had written the King "as a matter of courtesy," although he said he felt that he was so far removed from possible succession to the Crown that he did not come under the Marriage Act of 1772. That act makes it mandatory for the King to consent to royal bethrothals.

Court circles were reported to have felt that even a nobleman thirtieth or fortieth in line for the throne should have handled matters more in accordance with protocol.

Asked when he had written the King, Milford Haven said only that it was "a very short time ago."

Milford Haven, whose main job recently has been selling electric heaters, remarked that "it will be a big wedding."

Several Maids of Honor

He said the ceremony would be held "definitely in Washington at the home of Mrs. Simpson's mother (2029 Connecticut ave.) at the end of November. The best man will be British and there will be several maids of honor."

The Marquess was asked if Prince Philip, the Duke of Edinburgh, might be the best man—a role Milford Haven played when Philip married Princess Elizabeth in November, 1947.

"I don't see how he could make it," Milford Haven said regretfully. "But anyhow best men usually are bachelors."

The tall Mrs. Simpson, 26, mother of an 18-month-old daughter, wore a black Schiaparelli suit. Milford Haven wore a pin stripe suit.

"Probably Love At First Sight"

Mrs. Simpson squeezed his hand and remarked, "I am very much in love with David. It was probably love at first sight but I can't remember. This husband is definitely for keeps."

She said they met in London late in May and had four dates in a row. In July she visited the Marquess' mother at her villa at Cannes, and sometime after that he formally proposed. Neither could remember just when.

remark that "I am glad to be hand, showing the third finger bare.

"Still looking for a ring, aren't we David?" she laughed.

When asked if she expected to meet the King and Queen before leaving for the United States October 14, Mrs. Simpson said:

"No. I'm a little nervous about it."

Tells of Meeting Duke

She added, however, that she met the Duke of Edinburgh last week.

"In a night club?" someone asked.

"Not all things happen in night clubs," she replied.

As for her citizenship, the tall divorcee said she would live in Britain but remain an American.

"Once an American always an American," she said.

Milford Haven interjected to remark that "I am glad to be settling down. And I am glad I am marrying an American. I have always admired them."

The Associated Press version of the interview follows:

Asked whether she and the Marquess will bring her 18-month-old daughter, Gwendolyn, to Britain when they return, she became confused and said quickly "Oh, let's leave her out of it. All that's not settled yet."

Dollar Problem Difficult

The Marquess added: "There are so many factors."

The Marquess said he didn't think any members of the royal family will attend his wedding—"My own relatives will find it very difficult with the dollar problem."

The Marquess' mother, the Marchioness Nadejda, a daughter of the Grand Duke Michael of Russia, will attend the wedding, however, he said.

Mrs. Simpson said she hasn't made any decisions on bridesmaids and no clergyman has been selected, she added. She is Episcopalian. The Marquess belongs to the Church of England.

She was married to William Simpson, Chicago department store executive, in 1946. The marriage ended in Reno last year.

She told reporters "I think you can say I'm comfortably off. I have an independent income."

Alimony from Simpson, she said, was "very small" and doesn't amount to anything."

Asked whether she planned to have a number of children, she smiled and said, "Well, I like children."

The marquess chuckled, "That's looking a bit far ahead—after all, we're not married yet."

Ignored by London Times

The Conservative London Times ignored the engagement, except for a paid announcement inserted by the marquess at a cost of 7 pounds, 15 shillings, the United Press said.

The newspaper's "snub" of the affair was considered additional evidence of the disdain which court circles feel toward the engagement of the marquis to a Reno divorcee.

"I have never known this to happen before," a well informed court source said. "The news of a forthcoming marriage involving a member of the royal family or even a titled family has always been either inserted in the court circular or high up in the news columns."

It was considered unlikely that any member of the royal family would attend the wedding.

Wedding Rehearsed After Earl Meets Girl

London, Sept. 28 (U.P.)—The Earl of Harewood, millionaire nephew of King George and eleventh in succession to the British throne, and Marion Stein, beautiful 22-year-old Viennese-born commoner, rehearsed their wedding today in preparation for the ceremony Thursday in the presence of the Royal Family.

King George, Queen Elizabeth, the two princesses and the Duke of Edinburg will make an overnight train trip from their Scottish vacation retreat in Balmoral to attend the ceremony.

Coal Yards to Resume Saturday Operation

Coal yards which have been closed on Saturdays during the summer will be open every Saturday, beginning this week, it was announced yesterday by Patrick A. Deck, chairman of the coal division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

Sin Isn't All Women Sell, Judge Rules

Women may do a lot of things for money, and that's one reason why Henry Moses Jones, 19, of 406 C st. ne., is a free man.

He was acquitted of a charge of soliciting prostitution by Judge Thomas D. Quinn yesterday in Municipal Court.

The judge ruled that it is not proven beyond a reasonable doubt that a person is soliciting prostitution when he asks three men at night whether they would like some girls and says it will cost them $2.50 each.

That's what Jones did, according to police. The men were approached, according to evidence, near the Greyhound Bus Terminal August 31 at 2:30 a. m. Jones took the men to 7th and M sts. nw. where they refused some girls, police testified. Officers following them arrested Jones, they said.

Judge Quinn said that the Government had failed to prove that Jones was going to get the girls for "immoral purposes." There were other things that Jones might be thinking of besides what the police had in mind, the judge said.

Too Many Crooks Spoil Brothel So Paris Reconsiders Its Ban

Paris, Sept. 28 (NYHT.)—After less than three years of imposed virtuousness, Paris shows signs of stirring once again. A motion before the municipal council today urged the reopening of the city's brothels, which were closed October 13, 1946.

The motion was made by Pierre Benoist, who based it upon the most moral grounds. "The suppression of these establishments," he said, "besides leading daily to deplorable moral disturbances, has deprived of their means of existence a whole group of doubtful individuals, who have become thieves and assassins."

The law of 1946, was passed, largely because no one wanted to go on record as voting against it. Benoist urges a secret vote this time.

To the most casual visitor in Paris, it is apparent that as a moral measure, its success has been less than questionable. It is not difficult to permit oneself to be encumbered with a girl friend on the Champs Elysees or the Rue de Berri, day or night. It is, in fact, difficult to escape. While they do not normally knock a single man down in their efforts to become friendly, they are quite likely to bruise him badly.

The motion to alter the law is not likely to pass. The girls, however, will continue to pass.

Defense Moves For Mistrial in Communist Trial

New York, Sept. 28 (U.P.)—The defense in the 9-month-old Communist conspiracy trial today moved for a mistrial.

The defense charged that Federal Judge Harold R. Medina had harassed the 11 defendants, denying them their constitutional rights.

They also argued that "questions had been raised" as to bias on the part of two jurors, and that prejudicial statements ordered stricken from the record "can't be removed from the jurors' minds."

The attorneys also made further motions aimed at freeing the 11 defendants, charged with conspiring to advocate the forceful overthrow of the United States Government.

Judge Medina took the motions under advisement.

DESIGNED BY DuMont

A plus-powered television receiver for weak signal reception areas

HERE'S WHERE YOU NEED THE DUMONT SUSSEX:

IN THE CITY—In areas of high interference; or where you are shielded by high buildings, houses, trees and similar obstructions.

IN THE SUBURBS—Where a combination of distance and local interference often gives poor reception.

FAR OUT IN THE COUNTRY—Beyond the ordinary range of good reception—perhaps cut off by hills.

EVERYWHERE—Because the DuMont Sussex is engineered for the toughest assignments, it gives you better television in normal areas.

Here's how the DuMont Sussex does it:

EXTRA SENSITIVITY—A highly sensitive circuit; plus the Bottom Couple Tuner; plus the Local-Distance Selector enable the Sussex to operate satisfactorily on a very weak signal.

EXTRA SELECTIVITY—Such a sensitive receiver would also pick up terrific interference were it not for the DuMont Selectronic Watchman, which guards against the nuisance waves.

FINE PICTURE QUALITY—Exceptional sensitivity and selectivity—combined with all of DuMont's other Extra Value Features, gives a clear, steady picture of brilliant detail.

...and it gives you FM radio, too!

As in all DuMont models, you also get FM radio—not as an accessory, but as an integral part—using the same precision tuner; the same special DuMont audio circuit; the same high-fidelity 12-inch speaker.

THE DU MONT SUSSEX—Designed especially to meet difficult reception conditions. 132 square-inch direct-view screen on a 15 inch tube. FM radio. Plug-in receptacle for record player. $545. plus tax and installation

Radioactivity Study To Be Undertaken

Pasadena, Calif., Sept. 28 (NYHT).—Scientists at the world's first laboratory where weather conditions found anywhere on earth can be duplicated are beginning a study of the effects of radioactivity on the plant life and trees of the United States, it was learned here today.

The laboratory is the new Harry B. Earhart Foundation's "weather factory" at the California Institute of Technology. It was dedicated only last June but already members of its staff are planning to discover how the release of atomic energy—such as would occur in the event of enemy bombardment of the United States—would change the growth and characteristics of the country's vegetation.

Radioactive isotopes will be used in the plant life study, which may provide a basis for future strategic studies of the damage to crops and food-producing plants and trees to be expected as an aftermath of nuclear fission.

The dream of plant scientists for many years of being able to reproduce accurately any climate already has come true at the Earhart laboratory. By opening and closing valves and throwing switches, scientists in a few moments can produce a pea-soup fog, a tropical cloudburst, the hot blasts of a desert sandstorm or a gentle drizzle of rain.

It is the hope of Dr. Frits Went, who is in charge of the laboratory, that whole new areas for food growing will be opened up as a result of his staff's research work.

A grant of more than $400,000 from the Earhart Foundation of Ann Arbor, Mich., financed the building of the laboratory at the suggestion of Dr. R. A. Millikan, professor emeritus of physics at the California Institute of Technology.

Cold 'Cure' Held 90 Pct. Effective

New York, Sept. 28 (AP).—A common cold cure which worked 90 percent of the time, if you caught the cold within the first hour is reported by Capt. John M. Brewster, United States Navy Medical Corps.

The cure is not one drug, but at least five, all antihistaminics. They are the drugs you take for allergic sneezings.

Captain Brewster reported his experiments in the United States Naval Medical Bulletin of last January-February. The drugs he used are pyribenzamine, thenylene, neoantergan, histadyl and benadryl.

For every hour's delay in taking the allergy drugs there was a drop in cures. Waiting six hours gave only 74 percent.

Captain Brewster declared it is possible to catch colds early enough. He said cold sufferers know when one is beginning.

"These new drugs," he writes, "eliminate sneezing, coughing and the profuse discharge from the nose which now is left invisibly on door knobs, faucet handles, hand rails, in the air we breath, and on other places of contact. If properly and universally used, the antihistaminics could reduce the incipience of colds near to the vanishing point."

No Red Legatees

Hollywood, Sept. 28 (U.P.).—Film Director Sam Wood, who died September 22, directed in his will made public today that beneficiaries to his estate, excluding his wife, be required to file a "loyalty oath" stating that they are not members of the Communist Party or subversive groups. Wood left an estate valued at between $100,000 and $500,000, his lawyers said.

Noah's Ark Believed Lost 'Eternally to Ages'

(Edwin B. Greenwald, Associated Press chief of bureau at Istanbul, accompanied the American expedition which this summer explored the Mount Ararat area searching for the remains of Noah's Ark.—Editor's note.)

By Edwin B. Greenwald

Dogubayazit, Turkey, Sept. 28. The Ark of Noah, if ever it landed on Mount Ararat, is lost enternally to the ages. It never will be found.

Some of the Americans who have just completed a grueling search of the great Ararat chain still hope confidently it will be uncovered some day.

But use of cold logic makes it certain it will not. Either it rests forever beneath deep and perpetual ice and snow at the peak of the 17,000-foot mountain or else it has been destroyed and its fragments buried in this volcanic wilderness.

The four-man expedition, first formally organized civilian searching party in Turkish record, explored every crevice and every clew. It scouted through the villages for a hundred miles around seeking anyone who might know anything.

The sum total of nothing was uncovered.

In the villages the old men and the young had heard the legend that a great boat once rested in the snow way up there. But no one ever had seen it, and they knew of no one who had.

For all its futility, there was good in the results of the expedition's search. This was reflected in a statement to me by Necati Dolunay, 36-year-old departmental director of antiquities and museums for Turkey. He said:

"It is indisputable that this expedition has done a great deal for science and research as regards the Ark. It finally has utterly disproved opinions and observations during more than 100 years that the Ark is in plain sight.

"It has disproved the all too-frequent claims that it is on the mountain plateau that reaches between Small Ararat and Big Ararat. Many persons, including Russians, have held to this contention. I do not believe that anyone, Russians or others, ever saw the Ark on the mountain."

Dr. Aaron J. Smith, Greensboro, N. C., Bible school teacher and former missionary to China, headed the expedition.

A pious, white-haired man whose 61 years kept him at base camps rather than going up Ararat, he still is not reconciled that the Ark is not there. He came with an abiding faith that it would be found; he left with an abiding faith that it will be found one day.

E. J. Newton, 46-year-old house painter from Colfax, N. C., likewise still believes the Ark is here.

But the other two members of the expedition now are satisfied it is not here. They are Walter Wood, 36, development engineer of Sea Cliff, Long Island, and Wendell Ogg, 24, physicist at the Oak Ridge, Tenn., atomic energy plant.

Wood sized it up for the two with a curt, "I've had enough. But at least I am satisfied personally that it is not here."

California Development Planned by Joe Louis

Los Angeles, Sept. 28 (AP).—Joe Louis Homes, Inc.

Under this firm name, the former world's heavyweight champion seeks to build several hundred nonrestricted homes on a 53-acre tract in the San Fernando Valley.

Louis petitioned the Los Angeles Planning Commission yesterday for a zoning change to permit construction of the low-cost housing project at Pacoima. The former champ said the houses will sell for $7000.

Household Color Video Sets Not Expected for 10 Years

By Hal Boyle

Passaic, N. J., Sept. 28 (AP).—A video pioneer says it will probably be at least a decade before you can have rainbows in your living room.

"I figure color television is still 10 to 20 years away," said Dr. Allen B. DuMont, one of the "big three" TV manufacturers.

The Federal Communications Commission is currently holding hearings on whether to authorize color telecasts.

"I think the FCC will postpone the thing until they have something decent to go ahead with," said DuMont. "There has been no real change in either the CBS or RCA systems in the last three years.

"We are experimenting with half a dozen methods ourselves, but you can't make a foolproof color system overnight. And there just isn't a system ready yet that is commercially feasible."

The FCC announced in advance of its hearings that it wouldn't approve any color system that would make television sets now on the market obsolete.

DuMont believes that by 1953 there will be 13,500,000 video boxes in use, 1000 TV stations on the air, and some 950,000 persons in the mushrooming industry.

The stocky, 48-year-old scientist-turned-businessman began at the bottom. In 1931 the young inventor made the biggest decision of his life—"to be my own boss."

He began turning out cathode-ray tubes in a remodeled garage.

"Our sales for the first year totaled exactly $30," he recalled, "and we lost money for six straight years."

But by 1941 the firm had an annual gross of $600,000. In 1948 it had grown to 27 million dollars, and this year DuMont expects it will reach 45 to 50 million dollars.

Miss Churchill's Forte Is Comedy

By Richard L. Coe

POSSIBLY BECAUSE she doesn't smoke cigars, is lean rather than round and only occasionally speaks in a basso profundo, it rarely occurs to one that Miss Sarah Churchill is the daughter of Winston, the Magnificent.

Miss Churchill is appearing this week at Olney in "The Philadelphia Story," which Katharine Hepburn brightened on stage and screen. Since, then, she does make you forget that she is the flesh and blood of one of history's most stirring figures, what impression does she achieve on her own?

She is interesting to look at, more narrow than ample, but with a fine aristocratic face and high cheekbones which recall her mother's. Her hair, fine copper threads, is indeed beautiful and you find yourself delighting in it. Her decidedly British accent doesn't fit Tracy Lord, of the Main Line, but this you're inclined to forgive so long as she isn't bearing heavily down on her "aw" sounds, as in "GAWWWWWGE."

As an actress she is distinctly below the level of the better West End leading ladies when it comes to creating a whole character, though in some individual scenes she is very good. But she is decidedly erratic. She has not been well directed in her present role and in some scenes is completely muddled as to what she's doing. Her few ricks, of voice and stance, are by no means enough to make a believable Tracy. This leads her into a stiffness and monotony that might be acceptable in a repertory actress, but is certainly not of star quality.

Her good scenes, however, are sharp, stylized comedy and the simple, underdone climax, both valuable in twentieth century playacting. Her experience has been in comedy and with her former husband, Vic Oliver, in the music halls, vaudeville to us. I always used to be wanly amused, in England, to see him billed as "The American Comic," and, in America, as "The English Comic." But all that was long, long ago, before he married Miss Churchill, in fact.

The cast Manager Skinner has assembled to play Philip Barry's story of the rich girl whose first husband cancels the marriage to her prospective second looks better on paper than it plays.

Lay this to the facts that Barry's play is a jerky patchwork whose weaknesses were originally disguised by the Hepburn magic and that John Craven's direction is poor.

Jeffrey Lynn, of the films, is the first husband whose affection for the True Love, a very yar boat, rekindles the Sacred Flame. Lynn is hte type described as clean-cut. He's also stiff and mechanical.

June Dayton frolics happily as the teen-age sister. June is immensely spirited and amusing, introducing a merry moment of "South Pacific" which adds neatly to the playwright's idea. From just one beautifully timed facial expression, June stops the show. (Since this is the Olney's final week, I guess you can safely say that THIS is Miss Dayton's final farewell of the season. Alas.)

"THE PHILADELPHIA STORY." Richard Skinner and Evelyn Freyman present the comedy in three acts by Philip Barry. Staged by John Craven. Setting by S. Syrjala. At the Olney Theater.

THE CAST

Tracy Lord	Sarah Churchill
Dinah	June Dayton
Mrs. Lord	Margaret Bannerman
Sandy Lord	Michael Steele
Thomas	Porter Van Zandt
Uncle Willie	Howard Wendell
Liz Imbrie	Philipps Bevans
Mike Connor	Robert Smith
George Kittredge	John Craven
C. K. Dexter Haven	Jeffrey Lynn
Seth Lord	Donald Foster
Elsie	Betty Lou Van Zandt
Mac	William H. Putch

Margaret Bannerman is splendidly tony as the Main Line matron; her presence invariably lends distinction. Robert Smith is likable as the perceptive newsman and Philippa Bevans, though miscast, has her moments as the lady photographer. Director Craven (once the schoolboy of "Our Town," in which his father, the late Frank, starred) is hopelessly poor as the prospective second husband.

For his final set of the season, S. Syrjala has designed a terrace with a living room background that might well be coveted by an actress accustomed to the stately homes of England. Would that this curiously erratic performance of the Barry skeleton were half so effective.

Traffic Toll Is 8 in 11 Days

Pvt. Emmett Gray placed technical charges of manslaughter and reckless driving against Corman. A preliminary hearing was scheduled for 10 a. m. Monday in Hyattsville Police Court.

Besides his father, a tile setter, the boy is survived by his mother, Mrs. Rose Bruno, and five brothers and sisters. They are Beatrice, 12; Angeline, 10, Annie, 7; Nick, jr., 3, and Rosemary, 8 months.

Grandfather Stricken

The accident occurred directly in front of the Bruno home. The boy's grandfather, Falco Bruno, collapsed from a heart attack after the accident, but was reported in satisfactory condition last night.

Hurt in the Hagerstown accident were Dr. Rudolph Snyder, 69, of 6504 40th ave., University Park, who sufered a hip fracture and severe cuts, and Mr. and Mrs. Elbert W. Baker of 5463 Nebraska ave. nw., Washington. The Bakers were treated at Washington County Hospital and released. Dr. Snyder was reported in good condition in the hospital.

Dr. Snyder

Police said the accident occurred on U. S. route 40, west of Hagerstown. They said Dr. Snyder was trying to pass a truck on Fairview Hill and met the Baker car coming in the opposite direction. Police said no charges have been placed.

Long in Federal Servcie

Dr. Snyder, who retired last year after 44 years of Government service, was a veterinary official of the Bureau of Animal Industry in the Agriculture Department.

During his active career, he received public recognition for sensational work in the eradication of foot-and-mouth disease in California in 1924 and 1929. At one time, he vaccinated all the bison in Yellowstone National Park in this work. He has been assigned to Washington since 1932.

An inquest was held yesterday into one of the recent series of traffic deaths, that of Mrs. Lucy Mayo, 48, of 2111 18th st. nw.

Held for Grand Jury

It resulted in Silas H. Hunter, 30, a construction laborer, of 506 P st. nw., being held for the grand jury on a charge of manslaughter.

Mrs. Mayo was struck down Saturday by a panel truck driven by Hunter at New Jersey ave. and N st. nw. She died the following day at Freedmen's Hospital.

Witnesses testified that Mrs. Mayo was in the crosswalk walking west across New Jersey ave. This conflicted with the version given police by Hunter after the accident that she was walking east. Witnesses also testified that Hunter was driving at excessive speed.

Hunter was released in $2500 bond.

Girl Pinned Under Car

In another accident, Miss Marguerite Booth, 30, of Springfield, Va., was pinned under a car for nearly half an hour yesterday after it skidded and overturned while rounding a curve on Route 236 near Lincolnia, Va.

The automobile was lifted by passing motorists. At Alexandria Hospital it was said Miss Boothe had suffered a possible fracture of the right leg.

Also treated at the hospital for cuts and bruises was Kenneth Woolfender, 17, of Route 3, Annandale, Va. Police said he was driving the car.

SCC Probes Cost of Phone Equipment

Richmond, Va., Sept. 28. (AP).—The State Corporation Commission was told today that the prices the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of Virginia pays for Western Electric equipment are the same as those paid by other Bell System companies.

The statement was made by John W. Meyers, representative of the general price manager's office of Western Electric.

He was the first witness called for cross-examination today when the SCC resumed hearing on the Chesapeake and Potomac application to increase telephone rates and charges in Virginia.

Myers said price indices established by Western Electric for central office equipment could be checked by any regulatory body sluch as the State Corporation Commission. But he also said, in reply to a question by Attorney Morton L. Wallerstein, that "it would be a tremendous job."

Wallerstein is representing localities objecting to the Virginia company's request for rate increases to add about four million dollars to annual gross revenues.

The company contends that rising operational costs and the necessity of carrying out a huge expansion program make the proposed rate increases necessary.

Norman S. Elliott, counsel for the Corporation Commission, opened the cross-examination of Myers by asking for detailed information as to how Western Electric determines price indices for equipment sold the Bell companies. The Bell system companies and Western Electric are subsidiaries of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co.

In the last previous phase of the hearing, which recessed September 15, the commission heard cross-examination on lnad valuation and financial reports.

The SCC started the current hearing last June, but continued it until September 13 to give experts employed by it time in which to study the company's financial and rate structure. It recessed again because some witnesses had to appear at similar hearings elsewhere.

Meanwhile, the SCC has frozen the company's rates at their present level until February 1, pending outcome of the hearing.

Navy Yard

Even before the District of Columbia formally observes its sesquicentennial, Washington's largest industrial plant is celebrating its 150th anniversary. It was on October 2, 1799, that the forerunner of the present Naval Gun Factory was founded at the mouth of the Anacostia River. Through the intervening years the United States Navy Yard, as it is still widely known, has played a big part both in the history of Washington and in the defense of the country. The anniversary is being commemorated this week with an open house at the Gun Factory and such added attractions as a visit from a British corvette, H. M. S. Snipe.

After the War of 1812—during which the Navy Yard was burned, not by the British, but by Americans when capture seemed imminent—ship construction became a secondary activity as deep-water ports elsewhere became more important. Armaments became the yard's main function, and it was the focal point of many anxious moments during the Civil War when the Administration sought to devise a counter for the depredations of the ironclad Confederate frigate Merrimac. The yard today is much more than a mysterious establishment behind fences along M and 11th sts. se., or a place to observe the President's yacht and a submarine or LST or two. It has become the largest naval ordnance plant in the world, and right now is engaged in the very modern activity of turning out naval guns, rockets and rocket-launchers with a staff that in June numbered 10,000 employes.

Washingtonians who visit the Gun Factory this week will have a chance to brush up their knowledge not only of the present-day Navy, but also of the way the Navy for a century and a half has been linked with the fortunes of their own community.

Cripps' Battle

Without a doubt Sir Stafford Cripps will have the battle of his life in obtaining a wage freeze from the British workers while domestic prices are going up in response to devaluation. How much prices will rise is problematical. But, with the Labor government equipped with weapons to stop profiteering, the natural reaction of devaluation on domestic prices will not be severe, though, since Britain is a great importer, it will be significant. From now on Britain is paying 43 percent more for all its imports. But Britain does not altogether live off imports, nor do all the imports have an impact upon the worker's budget, so that the price effect of the devaluation, according to some statisticians, will not be more than about 5 percent.

However, if the wage level goes up correspondingly, the result will be to put up the costs of making the things that Britain sells for dollars. This will in part offset the benefit to exports to the American market which the devaluation gave to Britain. To be sure, a cheaper pound is not the only way in which Britain can earn dollars, but it is the first essential, and this is recognized by the Labor government. For this reason the government is staking a good deal on the self-restraint of organized labor, asking labor to accept a lowered living standard as its contribution to the development of a competitive position in the dollar market. And in return for this restraint Sir Stafford has now announced that the corporation tax will be boosted—a step which, it is hoped, will make a wage freeze less unpalatable to British labor.

But the coating of the pill, in view of the existing tax burden in Britain, will certainly handicap the British in earning dollars. Taxation in Britain is already so high that business incentive is said to have been undermined. This has slowed down the export drive on the dollar market, though the drive hitherto has been more in talk than in action. The fact is that the market which attracts the British exporter like a magnet is Sterlingaria. For the most part this is still sheltered from competition, so that the British producer need not worry about schedules of delivery or attractive merchandising, as he has to do in the competitive dollar area. Also, he makes all that the traffic will bear. It is a trade, however, which, though it makes Britain's commerce look thriving on paper, is unremunerative to the nation as a whole. For most of the exports to Sterlingaria represent repayment on Britain's war debts (or, as the British prefer to say, liquidation of Britain's sterling balances) to the creditor members of Sterlingaria, notably India and Pakistan. It is said, indeed, that as much as two fifths of Britain's exports go to these creditors; in other words, these exports are unrequited in imports.

How to switch some of this activity to the dollar area is the problem facing Sir Stafford Cripps. Exhortation has hitherto proved ineffectual. Part of the problem was overcome when Britain's prices were made less noncompetitive by devaluation. The problem would be further eased if there were a standstill on wage increases, but the danger is that, with the boost in business taxation, Sir Stafford may have contributed to the freezing of incentive in trying to secure a freeze on wages.

Petty Jealousy

Petty jealousy—the unwillingness of Senators to see executive officials receive a higher salary than themselves—is the only thing that can explain the Senate vote to whittle down the executive pay bill. The tipoff was Senator Cain's amendment to raise the remuneration of legislators to $25,000 as a condition of granting Federal administrators the salary increase which President Truman, supported by former President Hoover, has sought as indispensable to the maintenance of efficiency and morale in the executive branch of the Government. The Cain amendment was not adopted, but after a show of juvenile theatrics last night, the Senate by a vote of 36-16 approved an equally shoddy substitute that will hold most administrators at the $15,000 level of Senators and Congressmen.

Any attempt to compare the value and importance of the public service rendered by legislators with that rendered by executive officials is as invidious as it is irrelevant. The members of Congress, in recognition of the need for adequate remuneration, increased their own net earnings by more than 50 percent two years ago. But they have kept the earnings of top-level executive officials static for a quarter of a century. This stubborn niggardliness now threatens to result in a disastrous exodus from the Government service.

The attempt, now stripped of all its piety, to justify this denial on the grounds of economy is ludicrous. On Tuesday, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill which would raise the pay of postal workers and accord them other benefits at a cost of 180 million dollars annually. The vote on this measure was 332 to 2. The increase may well be justified, although it comes on the heels of a pay boost granted the postal employes two years ago. But the eager granting of it and the raise for classified Federal workers provided in the Murray bill are in striking contrast to the quibbling and parsimony with which the Senate carved up the executive pay bill passed by the House which would cost only $800,000 annually.

The saving of this $800,000 would be, in truth, a most extravagant sort of penny-wise economy. We live under a government of laws adopted by Congress. But the administration of these laws depends upon men. Given the scope and complexity of contemporary governmental activity, administrators of the highest caliber are imperatively needed. Conferees still have a chance to rise above the littleness demonstrated by the Senate and to make possible the employment of able administrators. A decent and equitable pay scale is now an absolute requisite to good government. And this takes obvious precedence over senatorial vanity or jealousy.

Military Housing

Anyone who sees the photographs of military housing in Alaska brought back by the Joint Chiefs of Staff ought to become converted overnight to the need for immediate congressional action. What quarters there are on military bases in Alaska are in large measure substandard. But for enlisted men and officers living in rented accommodations off the post the conditions are atrocious. A tarpaper shack without plumbing is relative luxury; some families are forced to live in what look like abandoned tool sheds and even converted beer vans. Rents of $100 a month for one room are common—one quarter of the basement of an uncompleted house rents for $80—in a land where freezing temperatures are the rule nine months of the year or more.

The most significant thing is not that the accommodations themselves are deplorable, but that the lack of housing is a limiting factor on the number of troops that can be stationed in Alaska. It is ridiculous to expand military installations when they cannot be staffed. Moreover, the influence on morale is depressing, since large numbers of men cannot afford to bring dependents with them under such conditions. Defense Secretary Johnson has summed it up this way: "Adequate housing for the minimum number of troops considered necessary for the defense of Alaska will strengthen their morale and improve their welfare; and no single measure will do more to strengthen our defenses on that northern frontier."

Appropriations for Alaska are contained in the 614-million-dollar military public works bill, which has been languishing in both houses. Chairman Vinson of the House Armed Services Committee said some time ago that he would not press for action. The pictures ought to bring a change of heart. Included in the 138 million dollars earmarked for Alaska are such drastically needed items as hospitals, petroleum storage facilities and warehouses. Although the works bill is a part of the President's budget estimate, probably parts of the over-all project could be trimmed without harm. But certainly military housing cannot be considered a frill.

Undoubtedly there has been some profiteering in Alaska. But the conditions faced by military personnel reflect the general housing shortage there, and the only prospect of relief is in Government quarters for servicemen. Construction in Alaska is expensive, but it will be even more so if necessary work must be postponed beyond next summer. If the defense of Alaska is vital to the safety of the United States—a proposition no one would challenge—then the first essential is to provide for the welfare of enough troops to man the outposts.

Lobby Target

Leland Olds, nominated by the President to serve another term as member of the Federal Power Commission, is in danger of being rejected by the Senate because he has had the temerity to oppose the powerful natural gas lobby. He was known to be an opponent of the Moore-Rizley bill which passed the House but died in the Senate during the Eightieth Congress. He testified vigorously before the House and Senate Interstate Commerce Committees in opposition to the similar bills before the present Congress. These bills would amend the Natural Gas Act of 1938 in such a way as to remove from regulation of the Federal Power Commission all the independent producers of natural gas—about three fourths of the industry. The effect would be to deprive consumers of the protection afforded by Federal rate fixing and make them the victims of a price gouge by an already profitable industry.

Mr. Olds has had nearly two decades of experience in utility regulation. He served the New York State Power Authority from 1931 to 1939, when President Roosevelt named him to the Federal Power Commission. On that body, where he has completed two five-year terms, he has been vigilant in squeezing the water out of utility accounts and vigorous in pressing for gas and electric rate reductions. Testifying in his behalf on Tuesday, Ordway Tead, chairman of New York City's Board of Higher Education, observed that "if, as some allege, there is a disposition to have men serving on this commission whose first loyalty is to some lesser private interest, then Mr. Olds is not your man. He has served and will serve one interest only—that of all the plain people of America."

It is clear that there is a disposition, at least among the utility lobbyists, to have men on the commission whose loyalty is to private interest. This disposition was evident in the opposition to Mr. Buchanan's confirmation as a commissioner as well as in the opposition to Mr. Olds. It was evident in Representative Lyle's despicable and preposterous attempt to smear Mr. Olds as a Red because he worked and wrote for labor unions 20 years ago. The Senate can best demonstrate its own devotion to the public interest by confirming Mr. Olds at once.

CIO Showdown

If what CIO Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey says about a left-wing steal of the recent United Electrical Workers election is true, a split in this Communist-dominated CIO union is almost inevitable. According to Mr. Carey, the so-called right-wing non-Communist faction would have won the election if a number of delegates had not repudiated the instructions from their locals. This would indeed be an audacious coup by the Fitzgerald-Emspak-Matles clique in the UEW. The test of what is to come will be in how many locals disavow the action of their delegates.

In essence the UEW fight is a mirror of the cleavage in the CIO as a whole. President Philip Murray and other top CIO leaders have talked forcefully of a showdown in the CIO convention beginning October 31 at Cleveland. They have had plenty of provocation from such left-wing unions as the UEW, the Food and Tobacco Workers, the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, the Furniture Workers, and the Longshoremen. The Electrical Workers, for example, have issued a particularly imperious ultimatum on CIO policy. Other unions have withheld dues payments. Most of the left-wing bodies flouted CIO policy by opposing the Marshall Plan and supporting Henry Wallace.

But the tactics of the Communist fringe now seem to be for them to stay in the CIO until they are kicked out. This is probably smart from their standpoint because within the larger organization there is more opportunity for their machinations than in a small isolated band. Thus we have the sickening spectacle of wholesale "resignations" from the Communist Party and a parade to sign non-Communist affidavits under the Taft-Hartley law—a dodge that should fool no one.

This obnoxious trend toward conformity will make it more difficult for Mr. Murray and his colleagues to find specific grounds for ouster unless they arraign the left-wingers for past defections from CIO policy. But as long as the Commies remain, the CIO will suffer from cancer. Surgery is required, and a complete excision will leave the CIO in far healthier condition. If the national CIO stands its ground, it is more than likely that there will be splits similar to that in the UEW in most of the ostracized unions, with the non-Communist factions affording a base on which to rebuild. And that, apparently, is the last thing the Communists want.

END OF A SEASON

I could relinquish this; I had no fear,
Summer, as such, did not mean much to me,
The more especially this fleeting year:
An hour of sunlight in the apple tree,
A transient heat to take the chill from bones:
Ah, it was merely this, no less, no more
Than flow of water over mossy stones
And promise of another day in store.

And autumn held no terrors; I could face
The falling glass, the bitter yellowed leaf,
East wind and rain that would in time erase
All leaves. But suddenly the hour is brief:
Today your letter came; the year is old,
Though young, and I, within this sun, am cold.

Nuernberg Film

I wish to express my appreciation for the splendid work of your reporter John G. Norris in bringing the sordid story of the Nuernberg film into the open. The facts disclosed in this report prove once more the danger which has arisen from a situation in which the Army has been vested with a policy-making authority.

This situation was created by our occupation of Germany, Austria and Japan, and it became apparent after a relatively short time how little our military representatives were fitted for any peacetime tasks beyond purely administrative matters. Consequently, we witnessed the breakdown of denazification, the failure of a reeducation of the German people, the slackening decartelization, and now the resurgence of German nationalism, facilitated by such measures as the recent abolition of the licensing of the German press.

More and more, recently, warning voices have been heard against this trend of our policy. But the military policy-makers were bent on building Germany up as a bulwark against the threatening Russian expansion. In line with this policy everything had to be forgotten which would remind the American people of the German past and the crimes against humanity committed by the Nazis.

Thus we have to witness the shameful investigation of the trials against SS brutes charged with the slaughtering of American prisoners. And therefore, also, the reluctance of the Army to release a film showing these crimes to the American public.

Let us hope that it is not too late to revise our policy, and that the change from military to civilian (State Department) control in Germany may spare us a very unpleasant surprise.

Cab Complaints

Your September 20 correspondent, Charles C. Maggio, seems to have an exaggerated idea of the driver's jeopardy in cab complaints.

I drove a cab around Washington for 13 years, covering more than 600,000 busines miles. I was no angel, either. I was in traffic court 14 times, and before the board once. But at no time could I say that I did not get more than an even break. I never worried about losing my license, even for a brief suspension. I studied and learned the law and governed myself accordingly, well aware of any chances I took. I referred arguments about fares to the hack inspector's office and never heard anything more about them.

As for cranks, even the most vicious hesitates to go personally before the board and testify. It takes time, thought, and a good argument to make a case. One has to be pretty mad to follow through in such cases, and such anger is usually justified. Anyway, the first charge is always judged leniently. And it is very suspicious when one driver chalks up many more complaints than the rest of the boys.

Church Bingo

Lest your readers gain the impression that the "bingo" recently raided at Holy Comforter School was the first such occasion, or that the church's officials were innocent bystanders, I should be pleased to add some pertinent facts to your news story of September 21. During the past several years, some Catholic churches have adopted "bingo" and the various carnival-type gaming devices as standard equipment in fund-raising.

A few years ago, the local group, in attempting to utilize the mails to advertise its bingoes, ran afoul of the postal ban on lottery ads. Unwilling to forego mailing privileges, they hit upon the device of using a sort of double-talk, or "code," to evade the ban. Thus there appeared postal cards captioned "Holy Comforter Quizzo Committee." It was also necessary that the cards be easily understood by their recipients. The situation finally brought forth mimeographed ads from which I have the following excerpt (1947): "Beginning . . . October 20, the regular meeting place of the Penso Club will be in the Holy Comforter School . . . Same time 8:30 p. m. The Membership Drive stands as follows—JP's 200, AT's 50."

For the benefit of the completely uninitiated—the "membership" figures translate as "Jackpot $200" and "Attendance award $50."

Your story stated that bingo is legal in Maryland; but it failed to state that Maryland law flatly forbids cash prizes. Various Catholic institutions in the State (Mount Rainier and Hyattsville parochial schools, for nearby examples) display large outdoor signs boldly proclaiming "Cash Bingo." Obviously, Catholicism has great faith in its relations with Maryland authorities.

Import Difficulties

Mr. Paul Hoffman of ECA, who has generally done a very good job, always tells our European friends that their only salvation lies in trebling their exports to America. It's a fine idea, but there are many difficulties. Some of these difficulties are of our own making.

This summer, in England, I purchased 12 plates for my wife for which I paid $33.75, including the cost of packaging and insurance. Since I brought back very little else, I had no duty to pay. Having established this fact, I then received a note from Samuel Shapiro & Co., Inc., in Baltimore, telling me that I could have my plates in exchange for a check for $26.88.

Two accompanying invoices itemized the charges as follows: $2.73 for wharfage, $11.90 for foreign charges, $1 for collection fee, $1.50 for marketing and forwarding, $1 for messenger service—securing carrier certificate, $5 for customs entry, $2 for arranging bond and surety, and $1.75 for storage.

Much of this was completely incomprehensible to me, and still is, following all of the explanations which I have received from different sources. Since I believe that it is a bad practice to send good money after bad, and since the 12 plates are certainly not worth $70, I informed Samuel Shapiro & Co. that they could keep the plates.

In brief, I have made a contribution of $33.75 to the British problem of the balance of payments. In view of the devaluation of the pound, my contribution assumes substantial proportions.

GI Insurance Dividends

The dividend on GI life insurance has raised several questions, and even some feeling of injustice was expressed in recent letters to The Washington Post.

How can it be so large? Why is it less for ages over 40? Why are the low premium term and higher premium converted policies all receiving the same dividends for a given age? These questions and others arise primarily because the familiar dividends of mutual insurance companies are much smaller and their size tends to be related to the premium rate.

The answers to many of these questions appear when the important differences in the sources of GI and company dividends are analyzed and understood. First, it must be remembered that even though dividends on corporation stocks are taxable as income, insurance dividends are not taxable.

This original overcharge in the premium is to cover uncertainties in three parts of the insurance business, the number of death payments, the earnings of the investments, and the remaining expenses. Though for a single year these factors could be closely estimated, the margin in the premium is calculated for the larger changes possible over the policyholder's remaining lifetime.

The investment part of a policy, called the reserve, is bigger each succeeding year and earns more, so that any given margin in rate of earning contributes more to each successive dividend. This is the main reason dividends tend to increase with the age of the policy.

As the chance of living improves with advances in medicine and civilization generally, the saving in death payments contributes toward the dividend. During the last 50 years the improvement has been tremendous for ages up to 40. Since longer living only increased dividends there was little pressure to change the calculations and lower premiums. Only in the last year or two have insurance companies generally made this change. Beyond age 40 the improvement is real but progressively less conspicuous.

The big expense apart from death payments is the agent's commissions. Home office expenses are minor. Since expenses are concentrated in the early years of a policy, they are a further cause of dividend increase in later years.

The GI dividend, in contrast, comes wholly from a single one of the three sources, the improvement in the chance of living. Nothing was included in the GI premium to cover uncertainty of expense or investment, because there are no commissions, the Government contributes all "home office" expenses, and the 3 percent guaranteed earning of the investments is exactly met with a special issue of 3 percent Government bonds.

Why such a big dividend then? Because the premium without loading for expenses and interest still was based on old-time figures for a much too high chance of dying.

Why less dividend after age 40? Because the premium, though higher than for younger ages, was not as much too high.

Why the same dividend for all types of policy? Because the improvement in the chance of living does not depend on the type of policy.

A final related question is still to be answered. Should not premiums be reduced now to avoid further dividends so large that they might have a significant effect on the business conditions of the whole country, not to say the politics?

Washington Calling

Price Of Military Aid

THE POLITICAL equation on the arms-for-Europe bill can be expressed as follows: The willingness of the Administration to yield on certain points plus the resolute stand of Senators Vandenberg and Dulles plus—and this is the biggest plus of all—the Russian atomic explosion equals virtually the full amount of money requested by President Truman.

Two months ago it seemed most unlikely that Congress would give anything more than a token of aid. Now the pledges implied in the Atlantic Pact have been kept and a gloomy prediction made in this space in July has been proved wrong.

But whether it would have happened with the ease and speed that we are seeing in this last-minute sprint without the atomic explosion somewhere in the mysterious fastness of the Soviet Union is a question. There were Republicans and Democrats in the House determined to hold out for cutting the billion dollars to the pact nations in half as the House had voted to do.

While the flash of the Russian explosion resolved the immediate problem, it does not answer the questions that loom ahead in the future. Among American military men there is a feeling that it might be wise to go slow next year and see how the initial assistance is used. That, at any rate, was the attitude before the announcement of Russian success in atomic fission.

THERE will, however, be great pressure for another arms-aid program next year. The Ministers of Defense and many of the chiefs of staff of the 11 pact nations will be meeting here next week.

Each will arrive with a list of military necessities marked urgent. From the viewpoint of the security of each individual nation, they will actually be urgent necessities. The lists will include items for defense such as a radar network and the arming of at least a minimum defense force.

If the initial concept is carried through, the bulk of the billion dollars now authorized for the pact nations will go to France to provide arms for nine French divisions. It also will provide a start for tooling French munitions plants to modern production. But this will leave the chiefs of staff of the other nations in a most unhappy frame of mind.

They will understand the argument that the heart of western Europe must be strengthened first. But with the Atlantic Pact covering such a broad area, from Norway on the north to Portugal on the south, they will not want to be left completely defenseless on the fringes. The demand for a second arms-aid bill becomes almost irresistible.

But the question of spending and taxes is sharply to the fore at this point. It is related to the growing restiveness of the American taxpayer who is beginning to wonder whether there is any end to the need to help Europe, particularly as the benefits seem to him so remote and theoretical.

ALLIED with this is the feeling that if we can send all that money to Europe, then we can spend here at home, too. If I, as a Congressman, vote for arms for France, then surely I'm entitled to get a dam for my district and that's just the way my people feel about it.

This psychology has real dangers in terms of the national debt and the present deficit spending. From a small town in North Dakota comes a letter typical of many:

"Please tell, the American people where the billions have disappeared. Let charity begin at home. We need schools, roads, etc."

The deficit for the current fiscal year stood on September 22 at $1,668,824,876. Because of the upturn in business that deficit is less than had been anticipated. Perhaps for a country as rich as this with nearly 60 million people at work it is not serious.

If, however, it continues at the present rate for the rest of the year, over six billions will be added to the national debt. What this points up is the immediate need to arrive at some over-all plan. It should be a plan that would take into account the total resources of the American economy in relation to urgent security requirements abroad and at home. Above all, it should take into account the new Soviet development.

Naturally, no such plan can be final and definitive in all its details. There always will be unforeseen eventualities. But without any plan, the impression is of almost day-to-day improvisation with a billion here and a billion there. And this feeling is accentuated when the people who must pay the bill are told so little about the why and wherefores.

Save-A-Life League

In your September 10 issue a letter appeared stating that the National Save-A-Life League (which attempts to discourage suicides) should have a local office. In November, 1948, Mr. Harry Warren, president of the National Save-A-Life League, 505 Fifth ave., New York 17, N. Y., asked if I would consent to be their local representative. This I gladly did. I do not know if there are other local representatives. I hope this information will be helpful to you.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Second Phase

IF IT is true that the President announced the Russian atomic explosion only three days and two nights after he got the evidence, that would explain why the official comment has thus far avoided any discussion of its meaning. There has not been time to estimate the effects of this momentous event even if the President and the State Department and the Pentagon had had nothing else to do during the past few days.

Lippmann

IT IS, of course, true that they and the rest of us have known all along that our monopoly could not last more than a few years, and that, therefor., we ought not to be surprised that the Russians have made a bomb. But our knowledge that this would happen has been rather like that of a boy who knows that in a few years he will be a man who will be earning his living and raising a family. The boy will not have imagined in advance and made the specific decisions beforehand with which his job and his marriage will actually confront him.

There are no signs as yet that policies and plans have been worked out for what is in fact the second, and the radically different, phase of the atomic age. They will have to be worked out, and there is no use closing our minds by pretending that policies and plans based on the American monopoly will not have to be revised now that there are atomic weapons on both sides, not merely on our side, of the Iron Curtain.

IT MAY help to clarify the present problem if we look back to June 1946, more than three years ago, when Mr. Baruch laid the American proposals and Mr. Gromyko laid the Soviet proposals before the United Nations. When we study these documents now, it becomes quite evident, I think, that the American monopoly was then the crucial fact both for the Soviet government and for the United States.

We offered to relinquish our monopoly gradually in return for a system of inspection and control and of guarantees which were to be enforcible because we did in fact have a monopoly of atomic weapons. "Before a country is ready," said Mr. Baruch, "to relinquish any winning weapons, it must have more than words to reassure it." The American proposals insisted on the retention of the "winning weapon" until the United States was satisfied that atomic development, which was supposed not to be far advanced in Russia, had been brought under what Mr. Truman called the other day "truly effective and enforcible international control."

MR. GROMYKO, on behalf of the Soviet government, rejected the American proposals. This meant that while we did not relinquish the winning weapon, Russia was free to develop the same weapon, if she could, without interference or control. The Russians were unwilling to pay the price we set for sharing our monopoly, and they chose instead to attempt to break the monopoly. There can be no real doubt now that even then, that is to say three years ago, they must have possessed the theoretical "secret" of the bomb. Probably, however, it was not until a year later, when Stalin and Molotov began to say that the bomb was not a decisive weapon, that they were reasonably certain that they had mastered the art of manufacturing the bomb.

When Mr. Gromyko rejected the Baruch proposals, the only risk he took was that the American bomb would be used before the Russians achieved their bomb. Mr. Gromyko, therefore, offered to negotiate a treaty outlawing the bomb provided we would first destroy the bombs we already had. But he cannot have believed that we would do that, and he must have relied on an estimate, which was correct, that we would not and that we could not start a preventive war while we had a monopoly and in order to perpetuate our monopoly. The Russians knew we would not do that, though there were voices advocating it, because we were war-weary. And they knew we could not do it because we did not have enough bombs to win such a war or the air force to deliver them.

THEREFORE, in the first phase of the atomic age, that of the American monopoly, we were not able to impose our plans by force or to sell them at the price which the Baruch proposals exacted. The negotiations came to nothing and the Soviet government made the bomb and broke the monopoly.

Quite obviously the proposals which were rejected when we had the monopoly will not be accepted now that we have lost the monopoly. The unique and wholly unprecedented situation is ended, where one great power has a tremendous weapon that no other power possesses. Whatever chance there was to obtain some novel and constructive solution out of that temporary advantage has been missed, and the chance will never come again. Atomic weapons have now become like other weapons. An agreement to outlaw them or to regulate them can no longer be an agreement between the haves and the have-nots. It will have to be an agreement, if there is any, between two great opposing coalitions, each armed with the same deadly weapons.

THERE MAY be doubt as to whether the kind of agreement which is now possible would be better than no agreement. But there can be no doubt, it seems to me, that this country is in honor bound to explore the possibilities of agreement sincerely and persistently. The conscience of mankind, and the anxieties of many nations who are now much less secure than they thought they were, forbid us to take the nihilistic view that we can never reach any agreement with the Soviet Union because we have never as yet reached one.

As a beginning we should, I believe, give serious consideration to the principle of the resolution offered by the Indian delegation to the General Assembly —that the problem of atomic energy be taken away from the Atomic Energy Commission and transferred to the International Law Commission. A change of venue might do a lot of good. For since the situation is radically new, there is no point in having the same old men repeat the same old arguments which got them nowhere.

Confederates Reject Bid Of Charleston

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 28 (AP).—Historic Fort Sumter lost another decision today when the United Confederate Veterans decided to go to Biloxi, Miss., instead of Charleston, S. C., for their 1950 reunion.

The survivors of the Gray Army, here for the fifty-ninth reunion, actually had little to do with the decision. Their auxiliaries did most of their talking.

But they were promised that the Biloxi meeting will not be the last so long as there are two of them alive. Only 29 members of the vanishing army now survive and only four showed up for the meeting here.

Except for comparatively spry James W. Moore, 98-year-old commander of the veterans, the old soldiers were drowned out by the spokesmen of the auxiliaries.

Moore led the faction that wanted to "march" on Fort Sumter in Charleston Harbor.

But W. Scott Hancock, an elderly member of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, who serves as adjutant, plumped for Biloxi.

Moore said the next convention was "tentatively scheduled" for Charleston.

Devaluation Storm

By Andre Visson

"Unilateral" British Step Resented

PARIS.—There is a strong resentment in continental capitals regarding the devaluation of the pound. Continental financial and economic experts have been practically unanimous in insisting on the necessity of the devaluation of the British currency. They considered it as an indispensable precondition for the economic rehabilitation of Britain and for the eventual integration of the western European economy. But when the British finally did what they had been urged to do by their continental friends, they incurred more criticism than praise in European capitals.

Europeans — particularly the French—strongly resent the way the British proceeded. They resent Britain's "unilateral action," which is, they say, a "new unfortunate expression of Britain's un-European spirit." They accuse the British of having once more given a serious blow to European solidarity. Some go as far as the French Finance Minister, Maurice Petsche, who accused the British of having fixed for their currency "a rate of commercial warfare."

European economic experts are inclined to consider the new pound rate as a British device to capture the dollar and other markets. The man in the street, who cannot follow the technical manipulations of the currencies and evaluate properly their economic and social consequences, is not in a position to know whether the new pound rate is adequate or unduly low. But he feels as strongly as do his leaders that the British have pushed his government around. His feelings are hurt and his comment bitter — much more than that of the press, which does not conceal, however, the general irritation and disappointment. Many French papers comment sadly that the British action may have killed the last illusion about the possibility of building, together with the British, an integrated western European economy.

THE COMPLAINTS about Britain's opposition to the economic integration of western Europe have been heard in the European capitals for more than a year. The attitude of the British delegates in the OEEC in Paris has greatly contributed to the impression that the British were not really interested in European economic integration. The British naturally denied it, some conceding however that they were "very much interested," but that they did not have "much confidence" in its success.

Continental European economic experts—and some highly placed officials in the ECA—gradually developed the suspicion that Britain's ultimate objective was to attach all western Europe to the sterling area. This, however, proved to be impossible for two good reasons. First, as long as sterling is not convertible few western European countries can be tempted by the idea that their currency should be tied to that of Britain. Secondly, with the increasing return to liberal economic policies on the Continent and the rejection of state controls, western European countries felt no desire to tie their economies to that of Britain, which is subjected to rigid state controls and threatened by further nationalizations.

Britain's attitude toward the Council of Europe and the Consultative Assembly strengthened the European suspicion that Britain was, on her part, unwilling to tie her economic fate to that of western Europe as long as the latter refused to accept Britain's economic and social pattern.

In the lobbies of the Consultative Assembly at Strasbourg this writer heard many responsible Europeans express the opinion that it may become inevitable to try a "continental economic integration" of western Europe without Britain. Britain's unilateral action in devaluating her currency may indeed precipitate the creation of a continental "liberal economy group." The French are taking the initiative to this effect in discussing this project with the Belgians and the Dutch. The hope is expressed that the Italians and the Swiss may eventually join this group.

AMERICAN officials in Europe are following with great interest these new European trends. American economic experts in European capitals agree with the Europeans that Britain has proved to be the main stumbling block to the economic integration of western Europe. But they point out that there are also other stumbling blocks on the continent of Europe. Indeed, European efforts toward closer economic cooperation such as the Benelux or the concept of the French-Italian economic customs union have not yet given what they promised at the time the respective agreements were signed.

But the prevailing feeling in American circles is that, since Great Britain now seems bound to have a special economic status in her relations with the United States and the dollar area, it may make the economic integration of western Europe much easier.

As to the European complaints about the unduly low rate of the pound, it is pretty hard to obtain a definite opinion from the financial experts. Countries which have devalued their currencies explain that they were obliged to do it because of the excessive British devaluation. But the Swiss a month ago received a report from their best qualified observers in London that while the British Treasury has been considering $3.20 as the devaluation rate, the rate of $2.50 would be much closer to Britain's economic and financial realities. The same Swiss report added that whatever the rate of the pound would be, the British devaluation was doomed to failure if it were not accompanied by a new injection of American dollars into the British economy. And the amount of dollars which the Swiss experts considered as indispensable to assure the success of the British devaluation was described to be around five billion!

Whether or not the Swiss figures are correct, I have not yet met a continental banker or government expert who believes that the devaluation of the pound and other European currencies can assure automatically the recovery of western Europe. The general belief is that these indispensable actions which must be considered as the first step in the right direction, will have constructive results only if they are followed by other steps, less dramatic than the devaluations but equally unpleasant to be freely accepted by the peoples of western Europe—and perhaps by the people of the United States also.

Trade Show Opens Today At Bethesda

The Bethesda Trade Show will be opened officially at 2 p. m. today with Senator Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.) cutting the ribbon stretched across the door of the exhibition building at Bethesda ave. and Ligon lane.

Booths in the show building will depict the various products and services offered by many of Bethesda's business institutions.

Also on display will be exhibits of the National Institute of Health and National Naval Medical Center.

"Miss Bethesda Trade Show" will be selected Saturday night from nine finalists picked in eliminations tonight, tomorrow night and Saturday afternoon.

In a parade last night heralding the opening of the show, the Montgomery Blair High School band received a trophy for being the best of the six bands taking part.

A float entered by the Donna Byrne Dance Studio on which youngsters stood costumed for various types of dances, was judged the best float in the parade.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars' color guard received a trophy for having the best marching unit present, and the Glen Echo Fire Department won the trophy given for the best-appearing single piece of fire equipment in the parade.

Such practical smartness

A sharkskin suit by Lebow is beyond criticism for appearance and style. Then, because of the nature of this hand-twisted worsted, it wears for an almost-incredible time. The suits retain their style lines indefinitely and even the press lines are more enduring than in most other suit materials.

Riggs Honors Taylor on Eve Of Retirement

By S. Oliver Goodman

Colleagues of William H. Taylor, assistant cashier of the Riggs National Bank, honored him at a farewell party yesterday prior to his retirement Friday after 45 years of continuous service with the bank.

Taylor

Robert V. Fleming, president and board chairman, gave Taylor a handsome gift on behalf of the board, after which refreshments were served to officials and close associates.

Taylor, as head of the bank's paying and receiving department, has set the time-lock on the vault for many years and his retirement carries somewhat the same precision. He started work on Saturday, October 1, 1904, and he is retiring on Friday, September 30, exactly 45 years to the day.

Taylor recalls that Riggs employed 36 when he was hired in contrast to more than 500 today. In 1904, the institution's assets were about 10 million dollars, while today resources are in excess of 300 million dollars.

In retirement, Taylor expects to spend more time on his two hobbies of raising dahlias and playing the organ. His blooms, some of which reached diameters of 14 inches, are famous among the banks' customers and employes.

HECHT DIVIDENDS: The Hecht Co. yesterday declared regularly quarterly dividends on the common stock and both classes of preferred stock. The 37½ cents a common share will be paid November 1 to stock of record October 14. The $1.06¼ and $1.12½ on preferred stocks will be paid November 10 to stock of record October 25.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Leonard C. Truesdell has been appointed sales manager by Zenith Radio Corp. for household radio and television . . . Richard W. Gilbert is the new air cargo sales manager for Eastern Air Lines . . . Vincent A. Catozella, member of investment banking firm of Reynolds & Co., has been elected president of O'Sullivan Rubber Corp. of Winchester, Va., succeeding R. J. Funkhouser who remains as board chairman . . . David P. Herron, formerly of faculty of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has joined the research staff of Atlantic Research Corp. of Alexandria.

SATURDAY TRADE: The New York securities markets and the Washington Stock Exchange will resume tow-hour sessions on Saturdays, starting this week. The local exchange, following custom, will be open for trading only in the daily-listed issues.

OFFERINGS: A 50-million-dollar issue of State of North Carolina road bonds is being offered at prices to yield from 0.60 percent for those maturing January 1, 1951, to 1.75 percent for those due at the start of 1969 . . . A group headed by Chase National Bank is offering four million dollars worth of Norfolk, Va., water bonds at prices to yield 1.25 percent for those due December 1, 1953, to 2.65 percent for 1977 maturities.

NEW PRESIDENT: Col. Allan M. Pope, former president of the First Boston Corp. and Investment Bankers Association, has accepted the presidency of the Investors League, Inc. He succeeds B. C. Forbes, magazine publisher, who becomes the League's board chairman. Daniel W. Bell, president of American Security & Trust Co. of Washington is slated to become a director of the league.

BARLEY: A Washington delegation of between 15 and 20 is expected to attend the 18th annual convention of the National Association of Mutual Insurance Agents in Chicago, starting October 10. The local group will be headed by Philip L. Baldwin, executive secretary of the association whose headquarters are in the Investment Building here.

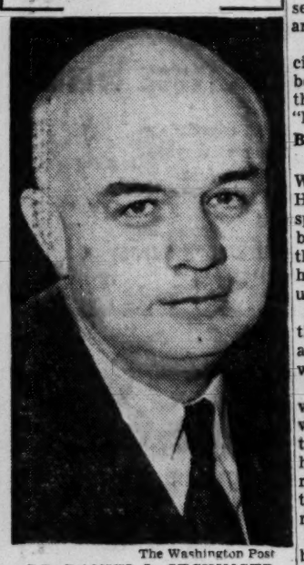
Ruhland Bemoans D. C. Bureaucracy

As Successor

Seckinger Is Indorsed By Ruhland



The Washington Post
DR. DANIEL L. SECKINGER
"Excellent formal training"

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, Assistant Health Officer of the District, has been recommended by Dr. George C. Ruhland, retiring Health Officer, as his successor, it was learned last night.

Dr. Ruhland wrote the District Commissioners this week that Dr. Seckinger has had "excellent formal training" and has the advantage over other candidates of "broad experience locally."

The retiring health official noted that departmental personnel were "in a high degree of restiveness" because no successor has been named as yet. Dr. Ruhland's last official day at work is Friday.

The Commissioners are expected to name Dr. Seckinger the acting health officer until a final appointment is made.

Dr. Seckinger came to Washington on October 1, 1935, after working in public health at Savannah, Ga., and with the State Health Department of Georgia as epidemiologist. He has held a Rockefeller Foundation fellowship and done laboratory work in the Army Medical Corps.

While in the District post, he has been acting superintendent of Gallinger Hospital for a year and a half, as well as coordinator of District hospitals.

A city-wide committee named by Commissioner Guy Mason is studying several names of candidates for Dr. Ruhland's position for submission to the Commissioners.

A lack of home rule and a "high degree of bureaucratic procedure" are the two principal handicaps holding up Washington's health program, the retiring health officer declared last night.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, who is retiring Friday after almost 15 years as the city health director, said the need for home rule is demonstrated by the "ponderous setup" facing department heads anxious to get things accomplished.

In order to get funds, city officials have to "justify" requests before the Commissioners, then the House and the Senate in a "long, time-consuming program."

Budget Considered Sacred

Once the budget has left the White House and gone to Capitol Hill, "we have no opportunity to speak freely. It is the President's budget and is sacred. I think that's too bad. It wouldn't hurt to have freer discussion. We could use our funds more intelligently."

Basically, the "problem is that the people being taxed haven't any voice in electing the persons who will distribute the money."

In Syracuse, N. Y., and Milwaukee, Wis., where Dr. Ruhland was health officer before coming to the District, he could explain health problems to the public and receive backing through the electorate for funds and personnel to meet the problems, he said.

The second handicap here is bureaucracy, Dr. Ruhland said. "Many persons are more concerned with the method and the form than with the substance."

Cites Instance of Bureaucracy

For example, a few months ago Gallinger Hospital was "desperately short of X-ray therapeutists," he pointed out. "Dr. Charlotte Donlan, newly appointed head of the Cancer Control Bureau, is a licensed, experienced therapeutist, and so I asked the Commissioners to permit us to use her at Gallinger until we could get relief.

"After the idea incubated at the District Building for a month, the order came back to first clear the plan with the hospital, the university medical schools and to check her efficiency on her assigned job.

"This meant that persons needing radio-therapy were denied it. They may have lost their chance for such help and their cases turned worse. The District Building people could have taken a phone and gotten answers on the problem in five minutes and approved the plan," Dr. Ruhland said.

Testimonial Dinner Tonight

"This kind of thing has happened again and again," he added. "Now I don't question their good intentions, but I have been interested in service to the public and such actions do not help." Dr. Ruhland declared, with emphasis.

The gray-haired public health man, now 70, straightened his customary bow tie yesterday as he admitted "feeling sentimental" about the end of his Washington assignment. He will still keep his hand in, as a part-time official of the District branch of the American Cancer Society, working on the public education end.

Tonight more than 400 persons are expected to turn out for a testimonial dinner to Dr. Ruhland at the Mayflower Hotel. Dr. Reginald M. Atwater, executive secretary of the American Public Health Association, will be the principal speaker and District Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler will be the toastmaster.

Ambulance Doctors Urged

The Arlington County Volunteer Firemen's Association has requested the County Medical Association to assign doctors 24 hours a day to respond with the Clarendon Fire Department ambulance. The doctors would be either on 24-hour duty or on 24-hour call.

John Paul Jones, president of the volunteer firemen's group, said the request was voted September 20 by the association.

He estimated each member of the medical society would be on ambulance duty about once every two months if the proposal were accepted.

The Arlington Fire Department ambulance, based at 10th and N. Hudson sts., is staffed at present only by firemen trained in first-aid techniques.

Dr. John Hazel, president of the medical society, said yesterday that a majority of society members are specialists, and he felt a better solution would be to staff the ambulance with Arlington Hospital interns. In this case, he said, "the ambulance probably would have to be based at the hospital."

Dr. Hazel said the society would act on the proposal at its next regular meeting October 20.

homes and home care of final stage and chronically ill cancer patients.

3. Start of an effective program for the control of heart disease, a project the health department wants begun at once to take advantage of Federal funds.

4. Setting up of a diabetes control program offering free diabetes detection tests to the public and supplying free insulin to the medically indigent who need it.

5. Continuation and expansion of decay-retarding fluorine treatment of children's teeth. The present program is financed largely through Federal funds which will not be available next year.

6. Establishment of "a competent rodent control program" to rid the city's commercial, industrial and slum areas of rats and mice.

7. More money to pay local hospitals under contract with the health department to treat medically indigent patients. The new budget seeks $871,374 to pay for the service, or $126,374 more than was provided for the current fiscal year.

From $10,330 to $14,500

8. Substantial raises for the health officer (from $10,330 to $14,500) and assistant health officer (from $9707 to $12,500), and salary raises to department employes as has been directed by Congress.

9. Provisions for adding 177 employes, ranging from assistant bureau chiefs to janitors and maids, to carry out proposed expansions in all bureaus. The department now has 550 employes, plus 240 others paid out of Federal funds.

10. Discontinuing of the department-operated Rapid Treatment Center at Gallinger Hospital for 5 to 10-day treatments of venereal diseases. With continuing evidence that both syphilis and gonorrhea can be cured with massive one-shot doses of penicillin the program can be carried on at out-patient clinics, Dr. Ruhland explained.

Plans at Hospitals

Out of increases provided in the budget estimates to run the department's hospitals, Gallinger and the Glenn Dale, Md. Sanatorium, Dr. Ruhland asked:

1. A fund of $925,000 to construct a residence at Gallinger for internes and resident physicians, now housed throughout the institution's buildings.

2. The sum of $285,000 for long-planned expansion of Gallinger's surgical facilities. In addition, $88,479 is being sought to equip the enlarged facilities.

3. An allocation of $70,000 for use in planning a proposed two-million-dollar administration and polyclinic building.

4. The sum of $295,000 for construction of a warehouse at Glenn Dale Sanatorium, which now has no such facility.

5. Allotment of $80,000 for construction of a utility building at Glen Dale Sanatorium, where now there is none.

6. Another appropriation of $75,000 to build a third four-unit apartment building at Glenn Dale for its medical officers.

7. Large increases in funds for purchasing or replacing equipment and supplies for Gallinger and Glenn Dale.

8. Provisions to hire 619 new employes at Gallinger, including key personnel in the currently expanding programs for the hospital laboratory and its anesthesiology department and to man two new buildings there, and for 82 new employes at Glenn Dale, largely maintenance workers.

Cites Washington Post Poll

Apparent mindful that even the lucrative sales tax won't stretch to meet increased budget requests from all the District's departments, Dr. Ruhland backed up his bids for so much with results of a Washington Post Poll conducted in 1947.

The newspaper poll, Dr. Ruhland stated in his general mesasge accompanying transmission of the department budget to District Commissioners, indicated "that health and hospitals should receive first consideration out of eight programs (other major departments of the District) if the amount of tax funds available were not sufficient to cover all programs.

"Ninety percent of the people," his message continued, "rated public health and hospitals as their first, second or third choice. Fifty-one percent of the people rated public health and hospitals as their first choice."

Noting that acute infectious diseases which have taken their greatest toll in children and young adults "are now under control, or partially so," Dr. Ruhland said more attention will be given to chronic illness in middle age and advanced age groups, cancer, heart disease, diabetes and rheumatoid arthristis.

Home Treatment Programs

The streptomycin program would handle 50 TB patients at home, providing one-gram injections of the new antibiotic at a cost of approximately 55 cents daily for each patient. Cost for the drug for the 40-day project was budgeted at $1100.

On the cancer home-treatment plan, Dr. Ruhland said, "the Health Department proposes to set up initially a limited progrem which will provide care for a daily average of 30 patients."

Approximately half of these cases will represent cases which are now bedridden at Gallinger Hospital and which will be discharged to their homes. The other half will be needy cases referred by private hospitals and welfare organizations.

The home-treatment programs, he said, would result in big savings to the District in terms of hospitalization costs.

Need for New Center

Most of the home visiting would be carried out by the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society on a visit-contract basis estimated to cost the District $7800 for the year.

To justify his department's request for a $750,000 health center in Central Northwest Washington, Dr. Ruhland cited proportionally high rates of syphilis cases, tuberculosis deaths and mental illnesses in the area which accommodates 26.5 percent of the District population.

The need for such a health center was recognized as far back as 1938, when Congress first appropriated funds for construction, it was pointed out. The war and subsequent high building costs intervened, however, and Congress this year retracted the appropriation.

Dr. Ruhland asked the District for $9454 for the proposed heart disease control program, a sum needed to make the District eligible for $16,132 available for such a project from United States Public Health Service funds.

The proposed diabetes control program would be geared to give blood and urine examinations to an estimated 30,000 people a year in the proposed free clinic.

Polio Strikes 2d Member Of Family

The second member of a family in the 5500 block of Fairglen Lane, Chevy Chase, Md., has been stricken with polio, the Montgomery County Health Department reported yesterday.

The new victim is a 7-year-old boy, being treated at home. His 12-year-old brother was admitted to Children's Hospital September 15, was cured and now is back home.

The District reported two new cases yesterday. One was a 5-year-old boy from the 3600 block of Horner Place, se., who was admitted to Gallinger Hospital Monday. The other was a 25-year-old woman from the 300 block of Croffut place, se., admitted to Gallinger and diagnosed yesterday.

Polio Toll in D. C. Area Now 173 Cases, 6 Fatal

A total of 173 cases of polio, six fata, have been reported by Washington area health authorities so far this year. The breakdown:

District—76.
Prince Georges County—41.
Fairfax County—12.
Montgomery County—25.
Arlington County—14.
Alexandria—6.

1949 Polio Cases to Date Set a New U. S. Record

A new national record for polio cases in one year was set last week, according to Public Health Service figures released yesterday.

The 2612 new cases reported for the week ending Saturday, September 24, brought the year's total up to 31,289. The previous high was 1916 with 30,000 cases.

The 1949 total is almost double that in recent high-incidence years—1946 and 1948, which averaged slightly more than 17,000 each.

Although 1949 set a new record many of the cases reported were nonparalytic, whereas 1916's 30,000 victims almost all were paralytic.

Statistics this week again indicate the seasonal decline in polio. It was the fifth straight week with fewer than the previous week. This week's incidence was almost 500 less than the week ending September 17.

In the District, polio this year is moving opposite to the National trend. The District had 69 cases up to last Saturday, compared to 91 for the same period last year. There were three new cases in the District last week.

Virginia showed the same trend, with 250 cases this year compared to 450 last year. Maryland, however, was well in line with the National increase, recording 147 cases up to last week compared to 59 last year during the same period.

There were 13 new cases in Virginia and 18 in Maryland last week. Paralleling their yearly totals, Maryland's weekly incidence showed a sharp increase over the previous week, while Virginia's was an unusual decline.

New York again had the highest weekly total, 288, followed by Michigan, Massachusetts, Illinois and Ohio.

Polio Totals by States Are Given in Table

Following is a record of polio cases reported by State health officials, compared with the same period last year. The statistics were compiled by the National Office of Vital Statistics of the United States Public Health Service. The States are listed in geographic sections.

Gaithersburg School Will Reopen Today

The Gaithersburg (Md.) School, which was closed Monday when the boiler overheated, will be reopened for classes at 8:55 a. m. today.

Officials said the furnace will not be put back into use until repairs are completed. The boiler became so hot Monday that Principal George Osterwise, fearing an explosion, dismissed school.

ARTHRITIS AND NEURITIS PAINS

A fast acting internal medicine called ROMIND, recently developed by the Knox Control Laboratory, is now bringing new hope, happiness and comfort to thousands of sufferers from the pains of Arthritis, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Sciatica, Neuralgia and Lumbago. ROMIND dissolves in the small intestine; then the ingredients are absorbed into the blood and thus can reach every part of the body. That's why it works so fast in helping 3 ways: 1. First dose starts curbing pain. 2. Helps Nature remove excess Uric Acid which often aggravates pains, soreness and stiff muscles. 3. Helps you work and sleep in greater comfort. Get ROMIND from your druggist today. Quick satisfaction or money back guaranteed.

Nats Stun Bosox, Yanks Win, Race All Tied Again

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE BLEATING from up New York way where the Yankees are still blaming Umpire Bill Grieve for dumping them out of the league lead doesn't quite obscure a couple of other factors that contributed to the Yanks' descent into second place.

For the Yankees, the painful irony is that in their hour of need, in the last, heated week of the pennant scramble when the Red Sox were crowding 'em, Joe Page took a licking on three consecutive relief-pitching appearances.

POVICH

Page, the incomparable, who had been the Yanks' No. One guarantee of victory whenever he poked his nose into the proceedings, was the losing pitcher against the White Sox when the Yanks couldn't hold an 8-1 lead. And a couple of days later, the impudent Nats manhandled him in another losing relief job.

And then Page took it on the chin the other day in New York against the Red Sox. He had a 6-3 lead at one point, but emerged as the losing pitcher. True enough the Yankees messed it up for him a bit with their crude infield play, and the Red Sox got the winning run on that hotly-disputed squeeze play decision of Grieve's, but Page himself wasn't awe-ing the Red Sox.

AT A TIME when their peerless relief man was bogging down for the Yankees, the Red Sox were finding a new hero of their own in Al Zarilla. That young man, quite overshadowed by Ted Williams and Dom DiMaggio in the Red Sox outfield, and a non-.300 hitter, was the big shot of those three straight Boston victories over the Yanks.

It was Zarilla who got the big run of the opener of that three-game series, with a scintillating dash all the way from second base to home plate while the Yankees were trying for a double play on a ground ball.

The next day, Zarilla unveiled other talents. With the game still scoreless and the Yankees threatening to get a run on Johnny Lindell's moderately long fly to rightfield, Zarilla boomed a superlative throw to Birdie Tebbetts at the plate on the fly, and Tommy Henrich was out trying to score from third.

He continued his heroics the next day in Yankee Stadium, you remember, taking four runs away from the Yanks in that 7-6 game, with those two catches that denied homers to Lindell and Henrich.

BACK IN MAY, the Red Sox turned over Stan Spence and $150,000 in cash to acquire Zarilla from the Browns, and it developed as the smartest deal of the season. His feats this month were not particularly surprising, at that. Around the league he is known as a September ball player. He was the driving force of the Browns in the last month of 1944 when that club won the pennant.

The Red Sox haven't been without their breaks, otherwise. Despite the traditionally bad Boston spring weather, they encountered few postponed games, and had full advantage of the September gaps in the schedule that are always listed to take care of postponements. When they came to Washington with a 10-game winning streak the other day, they had spaced it over 15 days.

The open dates gave Manager Joe McCarthy full opportunity to juggle his pitching staff and get the most out of his two aces, Ellis Kinder and Mel Parnell. During that 10-game streak, McCarthy had Kinder and Parnell in no fewer than nine of those games, six of which they won as starters, and three in relief roles.

FOR THE YANKEES there is the new comfort that they will be better equipped now to meet the Red Sox in their two do-or-die games this weekend at New York, than they had been. Joe DiMaggio is out of his hotel room andswinging a bat again, and Vic Raschi is apparently rehabilitated as a winning pitcher.

Manager Casey Stengel now will have a well-rested Raschi to throw at the Red Sox in one of the games. That isn't a hard decision. In his last start he tossed an impressive four-hitter at the A's, and before that he was shutting out Washington until he was hit on the pitching arm. He may be doing a nick-of-time comeback for the Yanks after bogging down for the last two months.

Joe McCarthy glared yesterday at a newsman who innocently asked him how he liked the strain of setting the pace. And then he mellowed a bit, and made himself quite clear. "The strain of setting the pace is wonderful," McCarthy said. "The Yankees would like to have it, don't you think?"

Williamson Picks:

Stanford to Score Upset Over Michigan Saturday

By Paul B. Williamsen

Nearly all the intercollegiate and major service teams will have played by next Sunday and it will be possible to predict by performance for the rest of the season.

The game of the week is an intersectional set-to: Stanford vs. Michigan. The Williamson System, climbing out on another limb, picks Stanford.

On Friday night, Maryland ought to beat Georgetown by one touchdown. Oregon should take UCLA, but it might be close.

ough, to the Red Sox.

It was Scarborough, the sturdy righthander who twelve months before had knocked the Red Sox out of the pennant, who gave them another bitter dose last night.

Scarborough went the full route, turning in a masterful four-hitter to get the 2-1 decision over three Boston pitchers—Chuck Stobbs, Kinder and Parnell.

Rain held up the game for 50 minutes in the third inning and there was high speculation that Scarborough might lose his sharpness, but nothing of the sort happened.

Parnell's heave was only the last of an already long succession of startling developments in that ninth into which the Nats took a 1-0 deficit. And well it was for the Nats that they won it, because they had little license to blow the game at that point.

Eddie Robinson almost pulled the Red Sox out of their high embarrassment in the ninth with a heedless and headless bit of base running, with the score still tied at 1-1.

Young Chuck Stobbs, the $25,000 bonus rookie of last year, was apparently breezing to a 1-0 victory when he took the mound in the ninth. Since the fourth inning, he had permitted only one hit, and Scarborough seemingly had turned in his smart effort in vain.

And then Roberto Ortiz opened the Nats' ninth with a single to left. Joe Kuhel replaced Clyde Vollmer with Ed Stewart for bunting purposes, and Stewart laid down the conventional sacrifice. Bobby Doerre staved off the tying run for a moment when he knocked down Robinson's single to hold Pinch-runner Gil Coan to third base.

Kozar Comes Through

The 17,000 fans in the park, thousands of them apparent Yankee sympthaziers, cut loose loudly when Al Kozar singled solidly to left to get Coan home with the tying run.

In that spot, McCarthy benched Stobbs, and called in Kinder. That recent conqueror of the Yankees lasted only for one pitch. Sam Dente whacked his first offering into right field for a single that filled the bases when Robinson held up at third out of respect to Al Zarilla's arm.

Now it was Buddy Lewis moving in to pinch hit for Al Evans, and McCarthy countered with Parnell, his left-hander. The count was one ball and one strike on Lewis, when an apparent squeeze play began to unfold. At least, Robinson was heading all the way to the plate from third.

He started too soon. Parnell, out of the tail of his eye, noted what was up, served a wide pitch to Lewis who was unable to bunt. The official Spalding ball was waiting in Tebbetts' mitt for Robinson before he was scarcely half way to the plate, and he was a dead duck for the second out.

Dente moved up from second to third on the play. But before the Red Sox could properly congratulate themselves for easing out of what had been a big jam, they were a beaten ball club. On Par-

Bob Margarita Picks Winners For This Week

(Each week, The Washington Post will put an area coach on the spot by having him select our football contest winners. Georgetown's Bob Margarita is the first victim.)

Personable Bob Margarita reluctantly selected 20 winners yesterday and picked the Princeton-Navy score under mild protest.

"Don't you see, he complained, "you're going to show the people how little we coaches know about football."

Here are the winners Bob predicts in the order in which they appear in the lineup on this page:

George Washington, Virginia, Army, Harvard, Penn, Northwestern, West Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina, William and Mary, Vanderbilt, Georgia Tech, Mississippi, LSU, Ohio State, Michigan, Southern Methodist, Notre Dame, Arkansas, Southern California.

Princeton, 28; Navy, 21.

By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

FOOTBALL FORECASTER OF THE WEEK—Dr. Willard H. Garman, 5136 10th rd., North Arlington, is the winner of The Washington Post's first weekly Pick-the-Winner contest. Here, he gloats over his victory with his two children, Warren, 8, and Shirley, 10. Dr. Garman wins two all-expense trips to the Army-Navy game and four tickets to the Princeton-Navy game

Knows His Potatoes

Dr. Garman, Agriculturist, Wins Post's 1st Grid Contest

DR. WILLARD H. GARMAN is a Ph.D. in the science of soil fertility, but he knows his potatoes in football, too.

The dignified Department of Agriculture administrator is the first weekly champion of The Washington Post's 1949 Pick-the-Winner football contest.

Almost a week ahead of time, he picked the correct winner in 18 out of 20 major college games last Saturday. And he almost guessed the exact score of Stanford's 44-0 victory over Harvard. Dr. Garman picked Stanford, 41-6.

If Dr. Garman hadn't been so loyal to Penn State (he grew up in State College, Pa., and graduated from Penn State), he would have come even closer to perfection.

He stuck by Penn State, and the Nittany Lions lost to Villanova, 26-6. His other mistake was a near miss. He liked Texas Christian over Oklahoma A&M, and that game ended in a 33-33 tie.

Dr. Garman entered the contest on impulse. He never entered a contest before. Without consulting his wife or two children, he made a special trip to The Washington Post lobby last Tuesday and dropped his selections in the hopper. That was the first day the list of contest games was announced.

HE NEVER PLAYED high school or college football. Before getting his job at Agriculture last June, Dr. Garman taught agronomy (study of soil) at the University of Georgia and Texas A&M. Charlie Trippi was one of his pupils at Georgia.

Dr. Garman lives at 5136 10th rd. N., Arlington. His title at Agriculture is (hold your breath) Principal Administrator in Soil Tech-

Navy vs. Princeton—You Pick the Score

PRINCETON VS. NAVY IN BALTIMORE. It's a tossup on Saturday's big football schedule. And it's the game which will break the deadlocks in this week's Washington Post Pick-the-Winner contest.

In addition to picking the winner of 20 top college games this week, you have to decide who will win the Middies-Tigers clash and by what score. Navy showed a lot of offensive skill in losing to Southern California, 41-20, last week. Princeton whipped Lafayette, 26-14.

As in previous seasons, this year's contest will reward those who know their teams and are students of the game. Read closely accounts of games throughout the season. Remember, this is a game of skill.

Each week the winner of the contest will receive two tickets to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, November 26, and an all-expenses-paid trip to this game for two persons.

The person submitting the most accurate entry each week also will receive four tickets to a major college or professional game in this area. The Washington Post will select this game.

The contest each week will include 21 major college games Each contestant will select the winner (or tie) of 20 of these games. On the 21st game, each contestant will give the "Probable Score."

Caps Trade Hertzberg For Halbert

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The Washington Caps traded a good little man for a good big man last night.

They sent six-foot two-inch Sonny Hertzberg to the Boston Celtics for six-foot nine-inch Chick Halbert.

It was a straight player swap, according to Coach Bob Feerick, with no cash involved. In another move, the local pro courtmen also added Chick Reiser, of the Baltimore Bullets, to their roster.

Reiser, a basketball veteran, was obtained after the Bullets had given him his release following their inability to get together on salary terms.

With Halbert on the squad, the Caps will now be able to put five men on the floor who are at least 6½ feet tall.

Teaming with Halbert on the "giant" squad would be Bones McKinney, 6 feet 6; Jack Nichols, 6 feet 7; John Mandic, recently obtained from Indianapolis, 6 feet 7½; and Kleggie Hermsen, 6 feet 8.

Feerick, however, will not play all of his altitudinous aces at the same time. Halbert will spell Hermsen at center; Nichols will relieve McKinney and Mandic will probably help out Feerick at guard.

Halbert is a product of West Texas Statae College. He played with the 1946-47 Chicago Stags team which dumped the Caps out of the playoffs, with the Philadelphia Warriors the following season and with the Celtics last year.

Sonny, who starred for City College of New York, stepped into the breach in the playoffs last season, when Feerick and Fred Scolari were both injured, and escorted the Caps to the finals against Minneapolis.

Coin Toss Decides A. L. Playoff Scene

Chicago, Sept. 28 (U.P.).—President Will Harridge announced today that a coin tossing ceremony will be held tomorrow to determine the site of a playoff game in case New York and Boston tie for the American League pennant. The playoff game would be played Monday.

Mapes Sends Apology on Grieve Affair

Chicago, Sept. 28 (AP).—American League President Will Harridge said today he has received an "acceptable" telegram of apology from Cliff Mapes, New York Yankees' outfielder, for alleged mistreatment of an umpire.

A league spokesman interpreted Harridge's statement as closing the books on Monday's heated squabble between Mapes and Umpire Bill Grieve.

Harridge yesterday ordered a $200 fine on Mapes and $150 fines on Catcher Ralph Houk and Manager Casey Stengel for the violent manner in which they protested the winning-run decision in the Boston Red Sox game.

He further told Mapes to apologize to Grieve or face suspension for "directly inferring that Grieve had a bet on the ball game."

Mapes' telegram to Harridge read:

"Very sorry if anything I said reflected on Umpire Bill Grieve's honesty. I certainly didn't mean it that way.'

New York's Desperate Rally Whips Athletics, 7-5

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.

New York, Sept. 28 (AP).—The Yankees' pennant hopes flickered and almost died, then were revived in one inning today.

The New Yorkers, after falling behind in the seventh, blasted their former nemesis, Alex Kellner, for three runs in the same inning to defeat the Philadelphia Athletics, 7 to 5.

As it developed later, when Boston lost a 2-1 thriller to Washington and Ray Scarborough, the New York victory boosted the Yankees back into a tie for first place.

The Athletics, submissive and apparently ineffective for six innings, scored all their runs in the seventh when they drove Tommy Byrne off the mound. But the Yanks, possibly inspired by the brief and unexpected pre-game appearance of the ailing Joe Di Maggio came right back to score three times in that inning and win the ball game.

The tension of a tight pennant race again put the umpires on the hot spot with Charlie Berry twice calling balks against pitchers, the second sending the Yankees' last run home.

Byrne, who had failed to survive the first inning against Boston Monday, apparently had the game well in hand going into the seventh. He had allowed only two hits up to that point and was leading, 4-0. Home runs by Bobby Brown in the third and by Jim Delsing in the sixth accounted for three of these.

But the Yankee lefthander apparently lost his stuff and before the inning ended, Fred Sanford and Joe Page also had made futile efforts to stop the A's. Allie Reynolds finally took over the pitching job after the Yanks regained the lead and hurled two superb innings in relief to hold it, striking out three men in the ninth.

Kellner might have escaped but for a messed-up double play attempt by the A's infield. Tommy Henrich started with a single. Yogi Berra was retired, but Pinch-Hitter Lindell also singled. Then Hank Bauer rapped a grounder to Third Baseman Pete Suder, who hesitated, then made a low throw to second. Fox dropped the ball and recovered it in time to force Lindell, but there was no play at first.

Kellner then issued walks to Jerry Coleman and Pinchhitter Billy Johnson to force in the tying run. Little Phil Rizzuto, a troublesome customer all day, laid down a perfect bunt and beat it out as Bauer crossed with the winning run.

With the bases still loaded Berry then called a balk against Kellner and sent Coleman home. Two innings before Berry ruled that Joe Coleman had balked but no damage was done that time.

'I Just Had To Win,' Says Scarborough

"I just had to win that one," shouted Ray Scarborough after his brilliant 2-1 victory over Boston last night.

"I got a bigger kick out of beating 'em tonight than last year because tonight's game had a good buildup and I had my reputation to defend."

Scarborough knocked the Red Sox out of the pennant last year with a 5-4 triumph two days before the season ended.

Next to Sam Dente and Scarborough, the two happiest players in the Nats' dressing room were Sam Mele and Mickey Harris, whom the Red Sox sent down the river to the Nats this summer.

"Wonder how Marse Joe feels about this," they chirped. "The old mastermind couldn't mastermind Ray tonight. And that Dente! Not even Boudreau on his best day could have played the game our boy Sammy played tonight."

A letter from Quincy, Mass., may have done more than anything else to knock the Boston Red Sox out of their undisputed hold on first place

"Some dame up their wrote this letter to me," said the Nats' shortstop, Sam Dente. "Boy, she called us everything. Said we always laid down and were yellow."

So Dente, mad as hops, roamed all over the field, made eight assists and five putouts to sparkle like a jewelry store window.

When Ray Scarborough struck out four Red Sox in the first two innings, permitting none to reach base, a Bostonian in the press box moaned, "That guy acts like he's trying to keep the Nats in first place."

There was some loud grumbling among the Red Sox after dispatches from New York told of Connie Mack's plans to pitch Phil Marchildon against the Yanks today. "That's making it soft for the Yanks," was the gist of their complaints. They were referring to Marchildon's incompetency all season.

AT LAUREL

Dear Folks:

There's a move in Maryland to have the four major tracks take their 25-day allotments continuously next year. Under the proposed plan Havre de Grace would take the month of April with Pimlico operating in May, Laurel in October and Bowie in November. It is reported that three of the tracks are in favor with Bowie opposed. Bowie, enjoying the best betting in the State, wants to hang on to its first two weeks in April and its last two weeks in November.

Seems like the thing will settle into a political battle. Maybe the answer to the light betting at Laurel now is the fact the plant opened a week earlier than usual. Fans are used to "October at Laurel" and maybe the turn of the month will bring crowds and wagering back to normal. See you on the rail.—BILL.

Virginia Colt Scores by 2½ Lengths

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Sept. 28.—Cornwall refused to give up here today.

The 2-year-old colt took the lead in the final quarter of the twenty-second running of the Richard Johnson Stakes and stuck by his runnings guns. In fact, he went into the wire 2½ lengths in front of his closest opposition while carrying the colors of A. S. Hewitt, Virginia sportsman.

Eastern Flyway, owned by W. T. Leatherbury of Shadyside, Md., was second, two lengths in advance of H. S. Clark's Puppet, a winner here on opening day. Eight fast 2-year-olds competed in the sprint won last year by Christiana Stable's Parliament ridden by Jockey Carson Kirk.

Jockey Bobby Strange had the mount on Cornwall and hustled the son of Some Chance the three quarters of a mile in 1.13 1/5, about normal time for the Richard Johnson named for the late former president of Laurel. The race was run over a fast track, under partly cloudy skies.

Cornwall became a slight favorite in the later stages of the betting, displacing Westhampton, who ran a disappointing race. Cornwall, well conditioned by Trainer B. F. Christmas returned a $6.40 mutuel.

First Stake Victory

The victory was the first stake triumph for Cornwall and his third victory since coming to the races in nine outings. The colt picked up $6065 today to bring his earnings to $15,340 for the season.

Westhampton, ducked toward the outside rail to eliminate himself at the head of the stretch. He raced well through the stretch when straightened away by Red Howell and finished fifth.

The drawing power of better grade horses was brought out by an increase in attendance, an estimated 9000 being op hand.

Finding the track to his liking, Cornwall broke with the leaders, was in back of Puppet and Westhampton for the first half mile and then took command to hold a comfortable advantage for the drive down the straightaway.

Strange had replaced Willie Downs as Cornwall's reinsman and handled the colt in fine style.

Jesse Linthicum, owner by Gee Cohen, of Baltimore, had little opportunity to display top form. Breaking tardily, he was last to leave the three quarter chute and then met interference when making his bid in the stretch.

WINNER—From P. 19

Dr. Garman Wins Contest

nology and Plant Physiology in the Office of Experiment Stations.

He is 36 years old. His children, Shirley Brooks, 10, and Warren Webb, 8, both have the same birthday anniversaries, July 31. They are budding sports fans.

Dr. Garman wins an expenses-paid trip to the Army-Navy game for himself and one of his friends. He also gets four tickets to a college game to be selected later.

Thirteen other contestants in the field of 7744 entrants guessed the winners in 18 out of 20 games, but no one came as close to forecasting the exact score of Stanford-Harvard as Dr. Garman.

Lieut. Col. Sherrard Wins Pentagon Golf

Lieut. Col. D. G. Sherrard, Army General Staff, took the golf championship of the Pentagon Officers' Athletic Club with a net score of 71 in an 18-hole handicap tournament held at Fairfax Country Club

Runner-up was Lieut. Col. Alfred Ashman with a 72 net.

Tribe Whips Chisox, 4-2, 22 for Lemon

Chicago, Sept. 28 (AP).—Bob Lemon filled a dual role today as the Cleveland Indians defeated the Chicago White Sox, 4-2. The victory put the Indians a length and a half behind third-place Detroit.

Lemon pitched a five-hitter to gain his twenty-second victory, two more than he won for the tribe's pennant-winning machine last season. The former outfielder-turned-pitcher also batted in two of Cleveland's runs and scored the third in the Tribe's three-run third.

Nats Stun Bosox, Yanks Win, Race All Tied Again

The Washington Post Sports
Thursday, September 29, 1949 19

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE BLEATING from up New York way where the Yankees are still blaming Umpire Bill Grieve for dumping them out of the league lead doesn't quite obscure a couple of other factors that contributed to the Yanks' descent into second place.

For the Yankees, the painful irony is that in their hour of need, in the last, heated week of the pennant scramble when the Red Sox were crowding 'em, Joe Page took a licking on three consecutive relief-pitching appearances.

POVICH

Page, the incomparable, who had been the Yanks' No. One guarantee of victory whenever he poked his nose into the proceedings, was the losing pitcher against the White Sox when the Yanks couldn't hold an 8-1 lead. And a couple of days later, the impudent Nats manhandled him in another losing relief job.

And then Page took it on the chin the other day in New York against the Red Sox. He had a 6-3 lead at one point, but emerged as the losing pitcher. True enough the Yankees messed it up for him a bit with their crude infield play, and the Red Sox got the winning run on that hotly-disputed squeeze play decision of Grieve's, but Page himself wasn't awe-ing the Red Sox.

AT A TIME when their peerless relief man was bogging down for the Yankees, the Red Sox were finding a new hero of their own in Al Zarilla. That young man, quite overshadowed by Ted Williams and Dom DiMaggio in the Red Sox outfield, and a non-.300 hitter, was the big shot of those three straight Boston victories over the Yanks.

It was Zarilla who got the big run of the opener of that three-game series, with a scintillating dash all the way from second base to home plate while the Yankees were trying for a double play on a ground ball.

The next day, Zarilla unveiled other talents. With the game still scoreless and the Yankees threatening to get a run on Johnny Lindell's moderately long fly to rightfield, Zarilla boomed a superlative throw to Birdie Tebbetts at the plate on the fly, and Tommy Henrich was out trying to score from third.

He continued his heroics the next day in Yankee Stadium, you remember, taking four runs away from the Yanks in that 7-6 game, with those two catches that denied homers to Lindell and Henrich.

BACK IN MAY, the Red Sox turned over Stan Spence and $150,000 in cash to acquire Zarilla from the Browns, and it developed as the smartest deal of the season. His feats this month were not particularly surprising, at that. Around the league he is known as a September ball player. He was the driving force of the Browns in the last month of 1944 when that club won the pennant.

The Red Sox haven't been without their breaks, otherwise. Despite the traditionally bad Boston spring weather, they encountered few postponed games, and had full advantage of the September gaps in the schedule that are always listed to take care of postponements. When they came to Washington with a 10-game winning streak the other day, they had spaced it over 15 days.

The open dates gave Manager Joe McCarthy full opportunity to juggle his pitching staff and get the most out of his two aces, Ellis Kinder and Mel Parnell. During that 10-game streak, McCarthy had Kinder and Parnell in no fewer than nine of those games, six of which they won as starters, and three in relief roles.

FOR THE YANKEES there is the new comfort that they will be better equipped now to meet the Red Sox in their two do-or-die games this weekend at New York, than they had been. Joe DiMaggio is out of his hotel room andswinging a bat again, and Vic Raschi is apparently rehabilitated as a winning pitcher.

Manager Casey Stengel now will have a well-rested Raschi to throw at the Red Sox in one of the games. That isn't a hard decision. In his last start he tossed an impressive four-hitter at the A's, and before that he was shutting out Washington until he was hit on the pitching arm. He may be doing a nick-of-time comeback for the Yanks after bogging down for the last two months.

Joe McCarthy glared yesterday at a newsman who innocently asked him how he liked the strain of setting the pace. And then he mellowed a bit, and made himself quite clear. "The strain of setting the pace is wonderful," McCarthy said. "The Yankees would like to have it, don't you think?"

ough, to the Red Sox.

It was Scarborough, the sturdy righthander who twelve months before had knocked the Red Sox out of the pennant, who gave them another bitter dose last night.

Scarborough went the full route, turning in a masterful four-hitter to get the 2-1 decision over three Boston pitchers—Chuck Stobbs, Kinder and Parnell.

Rain held up the game for 50 minutes in the third inning and there was high speculation that Scarborough might lose his sharpness, but nothing of the sort happened.

Parnell's heave was only the last of an already long succession of startling developments in that ninth into which the Nats took a 1-0 deficit. And well it was for the Nats that they won it, because they had little license to blow the game at that point.

Eddie Robinson almost pulled the Red Sox out of their high embarrassment in the ninth with a heedless and headless bit of base running, with the score still tied at 1-1.

Young Chuck Stobbs, the $25,000 bonus rookie of last year, was apparently breezing to a 1-0 victory when he took the mound in the ninth. Since the fourth inning, he had permitted only one hit, and Scarborough seemingly had turned in his smart effort in vain.

And then Roberto Ortiz opened the Nats' ninth with a single to left. Joe Kuhel replaced Clyde Vollmer with Ed Stewart for bunting purposes, and Stewart laid down the conventional sacrifice. Bobby Doerre staved off the tying run for a moment when he knocked down Robinson's single to hold Pinch-runner Gil Coan to third base.

Kozar Comes Through

The 17,000 fans in the park, thousands of them apparent Yankee sympthaziers, cut loose loudly when Al Kozar singled solidly to left to get Coan home with the tying run.

In that spot, McCarthy benched Stobbs, and called in Kinder. That recent conqueror of the Yankees lasted only for one pitch. Sam Dente whacked his first offering into right field for a single that filled the bases when Robinson held up at third out of respect to Al Zarilla's arm.

Now it was Buddy Lewis moving in to pinch hit for Al Evans, and McCarthy countered with Parnell, his left-hander. The count was one ball and one strike on Lewis, when an apparent squeeze play began to unfold. At least, Robinson was heading all the way to the plate from third.

He started too soon. Parnell, out of the tail of his eye, noted what was up, served a wide pitch to Lewis who was unable to bunt. The official Spalding ball was waiting in Tebbetts' mitt for Robinson before he was scarcely half way to the plate, and he was a dead duck for the second out.

Dente moved up from second to third on the play. But before the Red Sox could properly congratulate themselves for easing out of what had been a big jam, they were a beaten ball club. On Par-

Bob Margarita Picks Winners For This Week

(Each week, The Washington Post will put an area coach on the spot by having him select our football contest winners. Georgetown's Bob Margarita is the first victim.)

Personable Bob Margarita reluctantly selected 20 winners yesterday and picked the Princeton-Navy score under mild protest.

"Don't you see, he complained, "you're going to show the people how little we coaches know about football."

Princeton, 28; Navy, 21.

By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

FOOTBALL FORECASTER OF THE WEEK— Dr. Willard H. Garman, 5136 10th rd., North Arlington, is the winner of The Washington Post's first weekly Pick-the-Winner contest. Here, he gloats over his victory with his two children, Warren, 8, and Shirley, 10. Dr. Garman wins two all-expense trips to the Army-Navy game and four tickets to the Princeton-Navy game

Knows His Potatoes

Dr. Garman, Agriculturist, Wins Post's 1st Grid Contest

DR. WILLARD H. GARMAN is a Ph.D. in the science of soil fertility, but he knows his potatoes in football, too.

The dignified Department of Agriculture administrator is the first weekly champion of The Washington Post's 1949 Pick-the-Winner football contest.

Almost a week ahead of time, he picked the correct winner in 18 out of 20 major college games last Saturday. And he almost guessed the exact score of Stanford's 44-0 victory over Harvard. Dr. Garman picked Stanford, 41-6.

If Dr. Garman hadn't been so loyal to Penn State (he grew up in State College, Pa., and graduated from Penn State), he would have come even closer to perfection.

He stuck by Penn State, and the Nittany Lions lost to Villanova, 26-6. His other mistake was a near miss. He liked Texas Christian over Oklahoma A&M, and that game ended in a 33-33 tie.

Dr. Garman entered the contest on impulse. He never entered a contest before. Without consulting his wife or two children, he made a special trip to The Washington Post lobby last Tuesday and dropped his selections in the hopper. That was the first day the list of contest games was announced.

HE NEVER PLAYED high school or college football. Before getting his job at Agriculture last June, Dr. Garman taught agronomy (study of soil) at the University of Georgia and Texas A&M. Charlie Trippi was one of his pupils at Georgia.

Dr. Garman lives at 5136 10th rd. N., Arlington. His title at Agriculture is (hold your breath) Principal Administrator in Soil Tech-

Navy vs. Princeton—You Pick the Score

PRINCETON VS. NAVY IN BALTIMORE. It's a tossup on Saturday's big football schedule. And it's the game which will break the deadlocks in this week's Washington Post Pick-the-Winner contest.

In addition to picking the winner of 20 top college games this week, you have to decide who will win the Middies-Tigers clash and by what score. Navy showed a lot of offensive skill in losing to Southern California, 41-20, last week. Princeton whipped Lafayette, 26-14.

As in previous seasons, this year's contest will reward those who know their teams and are students of the game. Read closely accounts of games throughout the season. Remember, this is a game of skill.

Each week the winner of the contest will receive two tickets to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, November 26, and an all-expenses-paid trip to this game for two persons.

The person submitting the most accurate entry each week also will receive four tickets to a major college or professional game in this area. The Washington Post will select this game.

The contest each week will include 21 major college games Each contestant will select the winner (or tie) of 20 of these games. On the 21st game, each contestant will give the "Probable Score."

Caps Trade Hertzberg For Halbert

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The Washington Caps traded a good little man for a good big man last night.

They sent six-foot two-inch Sonny Hertzberg to the Boston Celtics for six-foot nine-inch Chick Halbert.

It was a straight player swap, according to Coach Bob Feerick, with no cash involved. In another move, the local pro courtmen also added Chick Reiser, of the Baltimore Bullets, to their roster.

Reiser, a basketball veteran, was obtained after the Bullets had given him his release following their inability to get together on salary terms.

With Halbert on the squad, the Caps will now be able to put five men on the floor who are at least 6½ feet tall.

Teaming with Halbert on the "giant" squad would be Bones McKinney, 6 feet 6; Jack Nichols, 6 feet 7; John Mandic, recently obtained from Indianapolis, 6 feet 7½; and Kleggie Hermsen, 6 feet 8.

Feerick, however, will not play all of his altitudinous aces at the same time. Halbert will spell Hermsen at center; Nichols will relieve McKinney and Mandic will probably help out Feerick at guard.

Halbert is a product of West Texas Statae College. He played with the 1946-47 Chicago Stags team which dumped the Caps out of the playoffs, with the Philadelphia Warriors the following season and with the Celtics last year.

Sonny, who starred for City College of New York, stepped into the breach in the playoffs last season, when Feerick and Fred Scolari were both injured, and escorted the Caps to the finals against Minneapolis.

Coin Toss Decides A. L. Playoff Scene

Chicago, Sept. 28 (U.P.).—President Will Harridge announced today that a coin tossing ceremony will be held tomorrow to determine the site of a playoff game in case New York and Boston tie for the American League pennant. The playoff game would be played Monday.

Mapes Sends Apology on Grieve Affair

Chicago, Sept. 28 (AP).—American League President Will Harridge said today he has received an "acceptable" telegram of apology from Cliff Mapes, New York Yankees' outfielder, for alleged mistreatment of an umpire.

A league spokesman interpreted Harridge's statement as closing the books on Monday's heated squabble between Mapes and Umpire Bill Grieve.

Harridge yesterday ordered a $200 fine on Mapes and $150 fines on Catcher Ralph Houk and Manager Casey Stengel for the violent manner in which they protested the winning-run decision in the Boston Red Sox game.

He further told Mapes to apologize to Grieve or face suspension for "directly inferring that Grieve had a bet on the ball game."

Mapes' telegram to Harridge read:

"Very sorry if anything I said reflected on Umpire Bill Grieve's honesty. I certainly didn't mean it that way.'

New York's Desperate Rally Whips Athletics, 7-5

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.

New York, Sept. 28 (AP).—The Yankees' pennant hopes flickered and almost died, then were revived in one inning today.

The New Yorkers, after falling behind in the seventh, blasted their former nemesis, Alex Kellner, for three runs in the same inning to defeat the Philadelphia Athletics, 7 to 5.

As it developed later, when Boston lost a 2-1 thriller to Washington and Ray Scarborough, the New York victory boosted the Yankees back into a tie for first place.

The Athletics, submissive and apparently ineffective for six innings, scored all their runs in the seventh when they drove Tommy Byrne off the mound. But the Yanks, possibly inspired by the brief and unexpected pre-game appearance of the ailing Joe Di Maggio came right back to score three times in that inning and win the ball game.

The tension of a tight pennant race again put the umpires on the hot spot with Charlie Berry twice calling balks against pitchers, the second sending the Yankees' last run home.

Byrne, who had falied to survive the first inning against Boston Monday, apparently had the game well in hand going into the seventh. He had allowed only two hits up to that point and was leading, 4-0. Home runs by Bobby Brown in the third and by Jim Delsing in the sixth accounted for three of these.

But the Yankee lefthander apparently lost his stuff and before the inning ended, Fred Sanford and Joe Page also had made futile efforts to stop the A's. Allie Reynolds finally took over the pitching job after the Yanks regained the lead and hurled two superb innings in relief to hold it, striking out three men in the ninth.

Kellner might have escaped but for a messed-up double play attempt by the A's infield. Tommy Henrich started with a single. Yogi Berra was retired, but Pinch-Hitter Lindell also singled. Then Hank Bauer rapped a grounder to Third Baseman Pete Suder, who hesitated, then made a low throw to second. Fox dropped the ball and recovered it in time to force Lindell, but there was no play at first.

Kellner then issued walks to Jerry Coleman and Pinchhitter Billy Johnson to force in the tying run. Little Phil Rizzuto, a troublesome customer all day, laid down a perfect bunt and beat it out as Bauer crossed with the winning run.

With the bases still loaded Berry then called a balk against Kellner and sent Coleman home. Two innings before Berry ruled that Joe Coleman had balked but no damage was done that time.

'I Just Had To Win,' Says Scarborough

"I just had to win that one," shouted Ray Scarborough after his brilliant 2-1 victory over Boston last night.

"I got a bigger kick out of beating 'em tonight than last year because tonight's game had a good buildup and I had my reputation to defend."

Scarborough knocked the Red Sox out of the pennant last year with a 5-4 triumph two days before the season ended.

Next to Sam Dente and Scarborough, the two happiest players in the Nats' dressing room were Sam Mele and Mickey Harris, whom the Red Sox sent down the river to the Nats this summer.

"Wonder how Marse Joe feels about this," they chirped. "The old mastermind couldn't mastermind Ray tonight. And that Dente! Not even Boudreau on his best day could have played the game our boy Sammy played tonight."

A letter from Quincy, Mass., may have done more than anything else to knock the Boston Red Sox out of their undisputed hold on first place

"Some dame up their wrote this letter to me," said the Nats' shortstop, Sam Dente. "Boy, she called us everything. Said we always laid down and were yellow."

So Dente, mad as hops, roamed all over the field, made eight assists and five putouts to sparkle like a jewelry store window.

When Ray Scarborough struck out four Red Sox in the first two innings, permitting none to reach base, a Bostonian in the press box moaned, "That guy acts like he's trying to keep the Nats in first place."

There was some loud grumbling among the Red Sox after dispatches from New York told of Connie Mack's plans to pitch Phil Marchildon against the Yanks today. "That's making it soft for the Yanks," was the gist of their complaints. They were referring to Marchildon's incompetency all season.

Stanford to Score Upset Over Michigan Saturday

By Paul B. Williamsen

Nearly all the intercollegiate and major service teams will have played by next Sunday and it will be possible to predict by performance for the rest of the season.

The game of the week is an intersectional set-to: Stanford vs. Michigan. The Williamson System, climbing out on another limb, picks Stanford.

On Friday night, Maryland ought to beat Georgetown by one touchdown. Oregon should take UCLA, but it might be close.

AT LAUREL

Dear Folks:

There's a move in Maryland to have the four major tracks take their 25-day allotments continuously next year. Under the proposed plan Havre de Grace would take the month of April with Pimlico operating in May, Laurel in October and Bowie in November. It is reported that three of the tracks are in favor with Bowie opposed. Bowie, enjoying the best betting in the State, wants to hang on to its first two weeks in April and its last two weeks in November.

Seems like the thing will settle into a political battle. Maybe the answer to the light betting at Laurel now is the fact the plant opened a week earlier than usual. Fans are used to "October at Laurel" and maybe the turn of the month will bring crowds and wagering back to normal. See you on the rail.—BILL.

Virginia Colt Scores by 2½ Lengths

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Sept. 28.—Cornwall refused to give up here today.

The 2-year-old colt took the lead in the final quarter of the twenty-second running of the Richard Johnson Stakes and stuck by his runnings guns. In fact, he went into the wire 2½ lengths in front of his closest opposition while carrying the colors of A. S. Hewitt, Virginia sportsman.

Eastern Flyway, owned by W. T. Leatherbury of Shadyside, Md., was second, two lengths in advance of H. S. Clark's Puppet, a winner here on opening day. Eight fast 2-year-olds competed in the sprint won last year by Christiana Stable's Parliament ridden by Jockey Carson Kirk.

Jockey Bobby Strange had the mount on Cornwall and hustled the son of Some Chance the three quarters of a mile in 1.13 1/5, about normal time for the Richard Johnson named for the late former president of Laurel. The race was run over a fast track, under partly cloudy skies.

Cornwall became a slight favorite in the later stages of the betting, displacing Westhampton, who ran a disappointing race. Cornwall, well conditioned by Trainer B. F. Christmas returned a $6.40 mutuel.

First Stake Victory

The victory was the first stake triumph for Cornwall and his third victory since coming to the races in nine outings. The colt picked up $6065 today to bring his earnings to $15,340 for the season.

Westhampton, ducked toward the outside rail to eliminate himself at the head of the stretch. He raced well through the stretch when straightened away by Red Howell and finished fifth.

The drawing power of better grade horses was brought out by an increase in attendance, an estimated 9000 being op hand.

Finding the track to his liking, Cornwall broke with the leaders, was in back of Puppet and Westhampton for the first half mile and then took command to hold a comfortable advantage for the drive down the straightaway.

Strange had replaced Willie Downs as Cornwall's reinsman and handled the colt in fine style.

Jesse Linthicum, owner by Gee Cohen, of Baltimore, had little opportunity to display top form. Breaking tardily, he was last to leave the three quarter chute and then met interference when making his bid in the stretch.

Tribe Whips Chisox, 4-2, 22 for Lemon

Chicago, Sept. 28 (AP).—Bob Lemon filled a dual role today as the Cleveland Indians defeated the Chicago White Sox, 4-2. The victory put the Indians a length and a half behind third-place Detroit.

Lemon pitched a five-hitter to gain his twenty-second victory, two more than he won for the tribe's pennant-winning machine last season. The former outfielder-turned-pitcher also batted in two of Cleveland's runs and scored the third in the Tribe's three-run triumph.

NICK BLOOM IS A PH.D.
(Doctor of Physiques)

WHAT Nick Bloom doesn't know about the human figure isn't worth knowing. Nick Bloom has custom tailored so many suits and topcoats for so many men (and women too) that he knows all the angles (and curves) in fitting a person. Nick approaches your problem with the precision of a scientist and the devotion of an artist. If you like clothing made exactly as you want it, we prescribe a Nick Bloom custom-tailored suit. It's a real tonic. And remember, Nick "operates" on such a low margin that you get a custom-made suit at less than the price of most ready-made clothing. See Doc Bloom today.

Briefly About the Area Teams

Terps 'Row' Over Hoya Game

MARYLAND . . . There's dissension in the ranks of Maryland's football forces, but it's the kind of disunity which bodes ill for Georgetown Friday night . . . The Terps' coaching staff is chin-deep in gloom over the team's prospects of beating the Hoyas, but the players are in happy disagreement . . . Bill Meeks, head freshman coach, will probably be shifted to the varsity to help Babe Woods handle the Old Liner backfielders . . . Tatum has abandoned his two-platoon system. He's shaken up his plans for the G. U. encounter, planning to use Fred Davis, team captain, at end on defense and at tackle on offense . . . "Mighty Mo" Modzelewski has also been shifted. Friday he'll play right halfback instead of fullback, which will be handled by Bob Roulette and Earl Roth . . .

Ticket sales for the game went up considerably following the Hoyas' upset over Holy Cross, but there are still seats available. Tickets may be purchased at either the Fairway Sports Shop on G st. nw., or Ritchie Coliseum . . . The Hoyas not only hold an 11-4 edge in the Maryland series, but they've also held the Terps to only one touchdown in the last five games . . . Joe Moss, 200-pound tackle over whom the Terps and VMI wrangled, has shown up so well in practices that he'll probably get the starting assignment along with Ray Krouse . . . The return of Center Jim Brasher helps the Terps considerably. The fiery Texan is a defensive standout who loves nothing better than tackling . . . Tip: Look for a guy named Joe—Joe Kuchta to be exact—to emerge as Maryland's running star against the Hoyas.

—MORRIS SIEGEL.

GEORGETOWN—Before the season's start, Coach Bob Margarita opined that, contrary to popular belief, his line would be stronger than his backfield . . . That's the way it looked in the triumphant Holy Cross opener . . . Maryland figures to win Friday night's game on its superior line strength . . . If Georgetown can muster a repeat performance of its second-half line play against Holy Cross, the Terps may be sadly mistaken . . .

Line Coach Bill Battles can take a great, big bow for that 12-play, 72-yard winning drive last Saturday . . . It included 11 smashes at a heavier, more experienced Crusader forward wall, good for an average gain of 6 yards . . . The right side was strictly sophomore, End Dick Losh, Tackle Gene Stack and Guard Joe Quiring . . . Vic Blanonis was the pivot man and Guard Connie O'Doherty, Tackle Tom Dolan, cocaptain, and End Bob Noppinger helped with the neat job of blasting . . .

That was really tough luck for for End Fran Desmond, recently jubilant over his election as cocaptain . . . Franny suffered a shoulder separation and may be out a month . . . Others bruised include Losh, Center Bob Keller, Guard Bob Fortunato and Tackle Jerry Kane . . . Guard Billy Rose, however, may come back . . . He and O'Doherty are reformed quarterbacks . . .

The Holy Cross game was something of a personal triumph for big Jim Ricca . . . The 235-pound Brooklynite just managed to squeeze on the traveling list, then went out and played one of his best games . . . Ricca enabled Billy Conn to make his 23-yard touchdown sprint, recovering a fumble by Billy on the previous play . . . And Ricca opened the huge hole—he was speechless when Conn remembered to thank him for the tremendous block . . .

—JACK WALSH.

Grim 'Skins Worked Hard

REDSKINS—There was nothing remotely joyous about the Washington Redskins yesterday, who were sent through two strenuous workouts at American U. in preparation for Monday night's tangle with the Steelers in Pittsburgh . . . Their 38-7 mangling by the Chicago Cardinals wasn't being mentioned, but Coach Billick Whelchel doesn't figure to let them forget it . . . Hal Crisler, veteran end, was due to have a thorough examination of his injured shoulder today, the chances being that he will miss at least two games . . . Against the Steelers the 'Skins will be bucking a 3-game losing streak in Pittsburgh . . . Last week the Steelers whipped Charley Conerly and the New York Giants, 28-7, prompting Redskin Owner George Marshall's crack that his team had traded "an apple for an orange" . . . Conerly was traded to the Giants by the Redskins for Howie Livingston, who also looked bad in his first '49 start . . BURNETT.

G. W. Knows About Veltri

GEORGE WASHINGTON — The Colonials aren't taking their Saturday night game against VMI in Lynchburg lightly. The two teams have met five times since 1897, and VMI has won every time. In the last two meetings, 1947 and 1948, GW was favored . . . Joe Veltri, new VMI regular quarterback, started only one game for the Keydets before this season. It was the '47 GW game in which he completed 15 out of 20 passes, one for a last-minute touchdown as VMI won, 13-7 . . . "There aint no justice," complains GW Center Don Druckenmiller. Last week in Charlottesville, Virginia's Gene Schroeder faked a GW defender out of his socks, caught a pass and ran for a touchdown. Druck left his position to cover for his errant teammate, and chased Schroeder across the goal line. Spotting Druck as the closest defender to Schroeder, one newspaperman in his story, blamed the Colonial center for allowing the score. We apologize, Druck.

nell's next pitch, they were licked.

Scarborough was magnificent all night for the Nats and quickly heightened the already-grim repect in which the Red Sox held him by striking out four of 'em in the first two innings.

He was sharp, with a curve ball that whistled and darted and on Ted Williams' only three times at bat Scarborough fanned him twice, got him to pop up the third time. The one hit he allowed in the first four innings was a cheap, infield single by Stobbs, his opposite number.

It was Stobbs who also got the third hit off Scarborough, a tainted drooping double to left that Vollmer could not reach, and it blossomed as Boston's first run. With one out, Dom DiMaggio rifled a single to center to score the pitcher.

Dente Sparkles

After that, though, Scarborough was completely unyielding. Not another Red Sox reached base against him, to the finish.

When Scarborough wasn't baffling the Red Sox, little Sam Dente was helping him over the humps. Dente roamed all over the shortstop territory, taking hits away from the Bostons, and twice he started double plays that required no middleman.

In the ninth he took what might have been big hits away from Stobbs and Pesky. He moved far into left field for a Stobbs' pop up, juggled it, and then retrieved the ball in mid-air. A bit later he scampered behind second base to cut off a Pesky hit.

Stobbs was doing a valiant job of it, too, for the Red Sox until the Nats caught up with him in the ninth. Going into that inning, he, like Scarborough, owned a four-hitter.

The Nats made threatening motions to score in the first inning when Yost led off with a single to center and Mele singled to right, but nothing came of the inning. Stobbs twice took smashes into the box and routed them to third and second for force plays.

After that Stobbs pitched two-hit ball, to take his 1-0 lead into the ninth. He pitched one inning too long.

Col. Matt Winn's Condition Serious

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 28 (U.P.).—Col. Matt Winn, 88-year-old Kentucky Derby promoter, was reported in serious condition in St. Joseph Hospital today following a second operation in less than three weeks for an intestinal disorder.

'Hill' Parley Deadlocks On Teacher Sick Leave

Senators Insist On 90 Days But House Conferees Hold Out for 60

A Capitol conference committee deadlocked yesterday on the District teachers sick leave bill.

Senate members insisted on a 90-day sick leave allowance. House members insisted on a 60-day allowance. The conference broke up with no plan for a further meeting.

District public school teachers now have no system of paid sick leave. If a sick teacher must stay off the job, she must hire a substitute out of her own salary.

The deadlocked bill would permit teachers to accumulate sick leave at the rate of one day per month of the school year, 10 days a year, to a total of 60 days in the House-approved version and 90 days in the Senate version.

The Federal Diary today is Jerry Klutz's Page One story on House passage of the classified workers, pay raise.

Senate members in the conference were Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) and Robert C. Hendrickson (R., N. J.). House members were Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss.), Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) and A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.).

Mrs. Smith, a former school teacher sponsored the 90-day sick leave plan to make the allowance the same as that of civil service employes.

For Support

Woman Sues Ex-Husband From Jail

A former Washington woman now serving a six months' sentence in District Jail for passing bad checks has filed suit against her former husband, a Bethesda real estate man, because he didn't keep up his maintenance payments to her.

Mrs. Isabelle Horan Lebling said her former husband's failure to keep up these payments drove her to passing the bad checks. She said his payments were her only means of support.

Her suit, filed by Attorney John R. Reeves, charges that William L. Lebling agreed in July, 1946, prior to their divorce, to pay Mrs. Lebling $150 a month until her death or remarriage, and that no payments had been made since November, 1948.

The couple have six children, three of whom live with Lebling. The others are married.

Lebling said news of the suit came "as a complete surprise." He has not been served with papers, he said.

He said he discontinued payments after he received word from "a reliable source" that Mrs. Lebling had remarried and was living in Philadelphia. He said he said he heard her new husband died a few months later.

No request for money mentioned in the suit ever was received from Mrs. Lebling after he stopped the payments, Lebling said.

Mrs. Lebling was arrested September 8, 1948, at the Shoreham Hotel and later pleaded guilty to passing 10 bogus checks totaling $350. She gave a New York address at the time.

Meeting Friday On V.D Drive

A recently organized citizens commitee will meet at 4 p. m. Friday at the Municipal Building to complete arrangements for a campaign calling attention to the dangers of venereal disease.

The campaign will be through newspapers, radio, television, jukebox recordings, posters, circulars and public speakers.

Already programmed is what is believed to be the first television show dealing with VD. Titled, "Call ME. 4600," it will be presented at 8 p. m. next Tuesday over station WOIC.

Bavarian Princess Enrolled At Catholic University Here

A blue-eyed German princess, who thinks her title is "too much of a bother—just call me Eleonore," became a coed yesterday at Catholic University.

The granddaughter of the late King Ludwig 3d of Bavaria, Princess Eleonore von Bayern, 31, will begin classes Monday under a scholarship in the National Catholic School of Social Service.

Gone with the war are days when "life was nothing but having fun and going to parties." They were best described by Margaret Mitchell in her Civic War novel, Miss von Bayern told reporters yesterday.

"Life was just too easy," she said of her existence in Hungary before World War II.

It was "because of the Nazis" that she and her parents, Prince Franz von Bayern and Princess Isabella, had left Bavaria.

And it was "because of the Russians" that they fled Hungary in 1945 and returned to Leustetten, near Munich, where Eleonore was born.

She worked as a Red Cross nurse during the war because she "couldn't stand all the suffering about me." She started a training course for Red Cross nurses in 1943, but joined the 528th Hungarian Red Cross Field Hospital when the battlefront drew nearer.

Miss von Bayern decided on a career of social work while living with her parents on a farm at Leustetten after the war. She enrolled at the Catholic School of Social Work at Munich, did social work in Belgium and applied for a scholarship at Catholic University here.

What she learns in her year she will take back to Germany, where most of her social work has been with "German expellees" from eastern occupied territories.

Policeman at Hearing Muffs Quiz About Numbers Racket

Police Pvt. Charles F. Knight yesterday proved he was a careful undercoverman, but flopped as a quiz kid when asked about the workings of the numbers racket.

Knight was the only witness before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence at the preliminary hearing that resulted in holding Eugene (Genie) Lewis, 51, of 636 Morris pl. ne. for the grand jury. Bond was set at $1500 on charges of operating a lottery and possession of number slips.

The policeman related that between September 1 and 3 he watched Lewis between 10:30 and 1:30 in the Old Mill, 15 H st. ne., taking pieces of paper and money from various persons and writing down something on each occasion.

Assistant United States Attorney C. Frank Reifsnyder then asked Knight whether he was acquainted with the numbers game. Knight said he had been a policeman for eight years, and had investigated vice activities, including lotteries.

Charles E. Ford, defense attorney, shouted: "So this man is now an expert. Let's see what he knows."

"What is a bleeder?" demanded Ford.

Knight finally admitted he didn't know, unless it happened to be "blood coming out of a numbers writer's pocketbook."

Ford told him a "bleeder" was a bet placed on two of the three digits comprising the winning number and paid off at around 60 to one.

"What is an overlook?" was the next question.

Knight missed on this one, too. Ford told him it was the situation where a clerk at numbers headquarters misses a winner in making up his payoff sheets.

Knight, after the quiz, testified his records for September 6 showed that 20 persons transacted paper-passing business with Lewis, and that Lewis placed the slips containing numbers combinations on a ledge in an alley. Knight produced the slips.

Lawrence said this was enough to hold Knight for the grand jury, and closed the hearing.

In other cases before Lawrence: Sande Smith, 40, and Gabriel Evans, 21, both of 1308 Q st. nw., were held under $1500 bond each for grand jury on numbers lottery charges, as were William Small, 30, and Theresa Coleman, 26, both of 98 Fenton st. ne.

A numbers lottery case against Howard R. Adams, 22, of 1306 H st. nw., was continued until October 5.

Slot Machine Case Quashed; Arrest Made Without Warrant

Police who arrested a gaming suspect without a warrant after they said they had played slot machines in his home yesterday found the charge of operating a lottery nolle prossed by Assistant United States Attorney J. Warren Wilson.

According to the information filed at Municipal Court, a policeman went to the address of John H. Kendrick, 43, of 1773 Willard st. nw., on September 19 to investigate a report of gaming activities there.

Despite the fact he was in full uniform and had no search warrant, it was said, he was admitted. He left after spotting three slot machines and returned later with other policemen all in uniform and with no warrants.

The officers said they played the machines until one paid off and then arrested Kendrick.

Wilson said he nolle prossed the charge for three reasons:

1. The police had no warrant although they had plenty of time to get one.

2. There was no evidence that the public had access to the machines or used them.

3. It is not illegal to possess slot machines so long as they are not used by the public.

Wilson said the case might have been different if the place were open to the public and an undercover man had been admitted.

John Carson Sworn in As Member of FTC

John Carson, former newspaper man, was sworn in yesterday as a member of the Federal Trade Commission.

The oath was administered by Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black. Carson will fill the unexpired term of Commissioner Robert E. Freer, who resigned. It runs until September 25, 1952.

Zoning Appeal Filed for Home For Spinsters

Trustees Would Build $600,000 Retreat at Military Rd. and 27th

The District Board of Zoning Adjustment was asked yesterday to permit use of a tract on the northwest corner of Military rd. and 27th st. nw. as the site of a proposed $600,000 Retreat for Friendless Maiden Ladies.

James C. Wilkes, attorney for James E. Schwab, owner of the tract, read a statement by Schwab noting that the property was one of the few available in the Northwest section suitable for such a home.

Miss Anna R. Shoemaker, who died here May 4, 1927, left a $625,673 trust fund for erection of the maiden ladies home. Miss Shoemaker asked that it be placed at Brandywine st. and Wisconsin ave. nw., but the will's trustees decided the site was inappropriate.

Letters Oppose Request

No opposition against the request appeared at the hearing, but the board has received several letters opposing the move.

In other requests at the all-day session in the District Building:

Homeowners in the vicinity of Nebraska and Connecticut aves. nw. asked the board to deny a request by Simon Krupsaw to erect two three-story apartment buildings there.

No opposition appeared against a request by the Christian Science Society, Inc., to establish a reading room at 1302 Rhode Island ave. nw.

No opposition was made against an appeal by Herman Hannauer for permission to establish a temporary parking lot south of Eastern ave. and west of the Capital Transit Co. turnaround.

Front Porch Unopposed

An appeal by Lewis H. Bretton, jr., to permit erection of a front porch on a dwelling at 5020 Klingle rd. nw. was unopposed.

The American Oil Co. asked permission to modernize a gas station, now a nonconforing use at the southeast corner of Massachusetts and Wisconsin aves. nw.

George Washington University asked for permission to continue a temporary parking lot for two years on the site of the former St. Ann's Asylum at Washington cle. nw, and to erect an auto parking garage on the south side of I st. nw. between 23rd and 24th sts.

David M. and Elsie M. Delo asked permission to establish a pre-school group for retarded children at 2945 Macomb st. nw.

Decisions will be announced today.

Talks on Better Roses Set for Friday Night

Home gardeners seeking the know-how of growing better roses should be interested in talks scheduled Friday evening at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of the New National Museum, 10th st. and Constitution ave. nw.

Dr. Charles E. Kellogg, internationally known scientist, will discuss soils and Dr. Freeman Weiss and Arthur C. Barrett will talk about "Fungicides and Insecticides." The occasion is a special meeting of the Potomac Rose Society at which members of the Colonial District of the American Rose Society will be special guests.

Enrollment At GW Equals '48's 12,000

Lines a block and a half long were formed at George Washington University yesterday as students registered for classes for the fall term beginning Monday.

At the close of the day school officials had not been able to tally the number of students, but Registrar Fred E. Nessell said enrollments equalled last year's when 12,000 registered.

Registration will continue through today and Friday from 9 a. m. to 7 p. m. Late registrations will be accepted during a two-week period beginning Monday.

Special desks were set up for GI's in the gymnasium and a large sign reminded the veterans that GI checks will be late in coming out in October. Veterans were urged to get part-time jobs and were directed to the university's job placement service for help.

Students returning to school found a new four-story student union building had replaced the old student club formerly in one of the college's basement rooms.

D. C. Highway Jobs Shown To Engineers

The Nation's top traffic engineers yesterday inspected Washington highway improvement projects, and were brought up to date on the situation at the new 14th st. bridge.

In a morning orientation session on local traffic problems E. H. Holmes of the Bureau of Public Roads told the annual meeting of the Institute of Traffic Engineers how the District approaches to the new span had sunk 6 inches in the mud since last March.

Holmes recalled the controversy over the bridge site, which Congress finally resolved three years ago by legislation, and commented:

"Congress settled the exact bridge location and design but the bridge itself wasn't settled. It is still settling."

He explained that the sinking phenomenon was not due to faulty engineering, but rather to the fact that the whole area on which the Washington approaches rest has "depressed."

Holmes assured the engineers that corrective steps were being taken.

The Federal highway expert also expressed his belief that the proposed Alexandria-to-Shepherd's Landing bridge over the Potomac would be of "no material help." The National Capital Park and Planning Commission is backing this location.

The engineers' four-day convention at the Wardman Park Hotel ended yesterday after a city-wide inspection of more than 20 completed highway projects, and traffic improvements in the planning stage.

New Classes at Dunbarton

Registration for the newly inaugurated Saturday and evening classes for special students at Dunbarton College of Holy Cross can be made until October 7, it was announced yesterday. Classes scheduled at the institution, 2935 Upton st. nw., include art, economics, English, history, journalism, Latin, philosophy and psychology.

Teen Canteen's Head Gets Vote Of Confidence

Woman Director Cleared of Blame In Beer Situation

The Falls Church Recreation Commission last night approved a vote of confidence given Miss Frances Mayse, director of the city's Teen Canteen, by the teenage Teen Canteen Council.

Both the vote and the commission's approval were given last night at a joint meeting of the commission, and the Teen Council in the canteen.

The meeting grew out of criticism of the canteen's operations last Monday by the Recreation Commission's chairman, Donald S. Frady.

At that time, Frady charged that "you can get a wheelbarrow full of beer cans every morning" from the canteen premises on Hillwood ave., adding he didn't think the city is getting its money's worth from the $300 a month salary paid Miss Mayse.

Frady said last night's action could be taken to absolve Miss Mayse of any responsibility for the beer-can situation. He said the situation had had a thorough airing at the meeting.

"It is agreed," he said in a statement after the meeting, "that with the wholehearted cooperation of the Teen Council, full use of the canteen and the services of its director could be made and the expense of its operation fully justified."

"Both the commission and the Teen Council," he said, "have instituted plans to insure full cooperation in programming and supervising activities for the future."

PUC Head Urges More Interest in Utility Hearings

James H. Flanagan, Public Utilities Commission chairman, yesterday urged Washington residents to take more interest in public hearings on utility company rate adjustment cases.

He made his attack on citizen apathy toward PUC activities at a luncheon meeting of the National Capital Optimist Club in the Continental Hotel.

"I am amazed at the lack of interest in these pending gas, telephone and electric light rate cases," said Flanagan, "and every one of them means something to residents' pocketbooks, one way or the other."

He said the aggregate investment of the four local public utility companies is about 370 million dollars, and they collect about 110 million dollars from Washington citizens every year.

"People ought to show up at our hearings, get acquainted and express their views," he said.

Saylor, Republican, Takes Seat in House

The brief ceremony changed the political line up of the House to 261 Democrats, 171 Republicans, 1 American-Laborite and 2 vacancies. Saylor, a Republican, was elected September 13 to the seat left vacant by the death of Representative Robert L. Coffey, jr., in a plane crash. Coffey was a Democrat.

Virginia Doctors Practicing Here Hit in New Order

Neely Won't Wait

Senate D. C. Group Gets No Quorum

Under a new high command, the Senate District Committee staged a trial assembly yesterday.

But the group beat a hasty retreat for lack of a quorum as Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) trumpeted a new order in Senate District proceedings.

The order will be, said Neely, that members show up for meetings within two minutes of the scheduled time, or else the meeting will adjourn for a week.

Neely then promptly put the new order into effect by adjourning the meeting, called for 3:30 p. m., at 3:34 p. m., until next Tuesday at 3:30 p. m.

As he marched from the committee room toward the Senate floor, he met two committee members on their way to the meeting. Senator Robert C. Hendrickson (R., N. J.) had paused near the committee door to talk to a newspaper reporter.

"No meeting?" asked Hendrickson. "Adjourned until next Tuesday," replied Neely.

A few steps further along the corridor he met Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), who had also paused to talk to a newsman. Neely gave him the adjournment order, and wondered aloud how he was going to get the members to show up on time for future meetings.

McCarthy suggested the answer might be to serve cocktails or tea and cakes. He then promised Neely to be on time for the next meeting and they shook hands on it.

Four members joined with Neely in appearing in time for the meeting yesterday. They were Senators Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.), J. Allen Frear (D., Del.), Bert H. Miller (D., Idaho) and Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.). Seven of the 13 members must be present to transact business.

It was the first meeting called since Neely took over as chairman to succeed former Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.), now Attorney General.

Certificate Needed For Each Patient Treated; Ruhland Explains System

A purposely irritating licensing system for Virginia physicians practicing in the District will start here soon, Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer said yesterday.

The new regulation will require Virginia doctors to obtain a certificate for each patient treated within the District, whether or not that patient is a Virginia or District resident. The certificate will cost $1.

Maryland Unaffected

Dr. Ruhland said the new license system is aimed at Virginia's "discriminatory" regulation requiring that District physicians who practice in Virginia pay a $50 a year licensing fee. The proposed licensing system will not apply to similar practice by Maryland doctors, Dr. Ruhland said.

Maryland and Washington physicians, he said, "will continue to get along amicably" on their present reciprocal agreement. This permits practice of one doctor in the other's territory with a "borderline certificate," costing but $1 for the year regardless of number of patients treated.

"The District Medical Society and the District Health Department have been trying for several years to get Virginia to participate on the same basis," Dr. Ruhland explained.

Though he denied interpretation of the new licensing system as one which would virtually ban Virginia physicians from District practice, he added, with a grin, that "it could certainly make such practice inconvenient."

'No Absurd System'

Dr. Ruhland emphasized that the step was being taken solely to nettle Virginia physicians into "doing their part to end this absurd system, this antiquated hangover from the days when unqualified schools were licensing physicians, this system of requiring admittedly qualified physicians to pay special fees for practice across State lines."

"The majority of the 70 Virginia doctors who now have the $1 'borderline certificate' should be able to get their new, individual certificates," Dr. Ruhland said.

He added the processing system to issue certificates to Virginia doctors has not yet been worked out. In any event, when the licensing system does go into effect, "perhaps October 1," he emphasized, the present "borderline certificates" will be worthless to Virginia doctors.

Call in D. C. Doctor

In cases where certification is not obtained in time, the Health Officer said, the Virginia physician would have to call in a Washington doctor to take over until certification was made.

Dr. Ruhland said decision to inaugurate the new licensing was made after he was advised by United States Attorney George Morris Fay that the District Commission on Medical Licensure has the authority not only to terminate its present system but to set up a new one charging $1 to the Virginia physician for every patient he treats within the District.

News of the proposed licensing was greeted, at least initially, with but little show of concern by medical society officials in neighboring Virginia areas.

Dr. Charles V. Amole, president of the Alexandria Medical Society, expressed no complaint or fear that it would disrupt present practices. He said Virginia physicians in the area neighboring Washington "see eye to eye" with Washington doctors on the problem.

Already, he said, his own society has twice appealed to the State Medical Board to try to reach reciprocity practice agreement with District medical authorities.

Dr. Kenneth D. Graves, secretary of the Virginia State Board of Medical Examiners, said at Roanoke, Va., that his board is powerless to grant "borderline certificates" under present State laws.

Friend Left 3d of Estate By O'Donnell

Thomas A. O'Donnell, Washington restaurateur who died last Saturday, left one third of his estate, estimated to total "more than $200,000," to a Mayflower Hotel secretary, Miss Marie Ethridge of The Scott apartments, No. 1 Scott Circle.

Miss Ethridge

This was shown in O'Donnell's will on file in District Court yesterday.

An additional third goes to Mrs. Mildred O'Donnell of 5745 13th st. nw., his estranged wife, and the remaining third equally to his three daughters, Mrs. Dorothy O'Donnell Freund, Pelham, N. Y.; Mrs. Janice Edelblut, 4801 Chevy Chase dr., Chevy Chase, and Mrs. Eileen Wolchick, 3319 Old Dominion blvd., Alexandria.

Attorney Charles E. Ford and Dr. Clayton B. Ethridge, the restaurant operator's personal physician and brother of Miss Ethridge, were authorized as executors of the estate to invest $12,000 of the total in any manner they see fit, the proceeds to go to O'Donnell's mother, Mrs. Emma Major of Marlboro.

Should the investment fail to return Mrs. Major $150 monthly for life, the executors were authorized to dip into the principal for the amount necessary.

Ford and Dr. Ethridge were also authorized to operate the O'Donnell restaurant at 1221 E st. nw., the proceeds to go into the estate. Another of O'Donnell's restaurants —at 1207 E st. nw., previously had been placed in trust with the income going to Mrs. O'Donnell and the three daughters.

Dr. Ethridge told reporters yesterday that "my sister and I have been close friends of Mr. O'Donnell for 25 years." He said she attended Eastern High "many years ago." Miss Ethridge, secretary to C. J. Mack, manager of the Mayflower, was not available for comment.

The will, dated 1940, was an executed carbon, the original having been lost. The carbon copy was given to Ford by James Fields, an auditor for O'Donnell.

Judge O'Connor Dies in California

Federal Judge J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency here from 1932 to 1938 and for the past eight years Judge of the Southern District of California, died yesterday in his sleep in his Los Angeles home.

O'Connor

The 63-year-old jurist, a bachelor, had been prevented by illness from taking his seat on the bench for more than a year. He was a victim of high blood pressure, and had been bedridden since last February.

Born in Grand Forks, N. Dak., he was graduated from the University of North Dakota in 1907. He won scholastic honors there he took a law degree. He later and at Yale Law School, when served on the faculties of both institutions.

Judge O'Connor was politically active in North Dakota while practicing law. He was elected to the State Legislature in 1916 and reelected two years later. He was an unsuccessful candidate for Governor in 1920 and United States Senator in 1922.

Judge O'Connor moved to California in 1925, and until 1930 practiced law and was associated with the late Senator William G. McAdoo. In 1932, he managed President Roosevelt's Southern California campaign, becoming a close personal friend of the President.

Mr. Rooseveelt, who called him "Jefty," appointed Judge O'Connor to the post of Comptroller of the Currency upon taking office in 1933. An ardent New Dealer, he advocated formation of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and other banking reforms in that critical period.

He resigned in 1938 to seek the Democratic nomination for Governor of California, but was defeated by Culbert Olson. In accepting his resignation, President Roosevelt commended him for guiding United States currency through a period of stress and strain."

Appointed to the bench in January, 1941, he presided over the trial of Charles Chaplin, who was later acquitted of Mann Act violations. In 1947, he ordered Federal seizure of the notorious gambling ship Lux which operated off the Southern California coast.

Judge O'Connor was the author of a book, "Banks Under Roosevelt," and held honorary law degrees from North Dakota, College of the Pacific, Southern Methodist, John Marshall, University of the West, and Southwestern.

Requiem mass will be celebrated by the Most Rev. J. Francis A. McIntyre, Archbishop of Los Angeles, on Saturday. Burial will be in Grand Forks.

Morton L. Gould

Indianapolis, Sept. 28 (AP).—Morton L. Gould, 85, retired coal operator and former president of the National Coal Association, died here last night.

Mass Friday

Mrs. Auth, D. C. Packer's Widow, Dies

Mrs. Hannah Auth, 61, a Washington resident for more than 40 years, died yesterday of cancer in Georgetown Hospital after a month illness.

Mrs. Auth was the widow of Anton A. Auth, who was engaged for a number of years in the meat packing business here. He died 17 years ago.

Mrs. Auth was a native of Baltimore and attended public schools there before coming to the District. She was a member of the sodality of the Sacred Heart parish and of the Daughters of Isabella.

Requiem mass will be at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, 16th st. and Park rd. nw., Friday, at 9 a. m. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Surviving is a son, Francis Auth, with whom Mrs. Auth made her home at 3420 16th st. nw.

Mark Moran Dies at 59; Union Chief

Mark M. Moran, 59, president of Local No. 5, Plumbers, for the last 13 years and inspector with the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission for eight years, died Tuesday after eight months of illness.

A native of Prince Georges County, he lived at 6118 Edmonston ave., Riverdale, Md., for the last 33 years. He married Charlotte Moran, who survives, in 1907.

Mr. Moran attended both District and Prince Georges schools. He was a member of Local No. 5, Plumbers, for 40 years; started the Stevens Citizens Association in Riverdale, was an active member in the Young Democrats of Prince Georges County; and judged elections in the nineteenth district of Riverdale.

Mr. Moran was a life member of the Holy Name Society of St. Jerome's Parish. He was also a honorary member of the Riverdale Volunteer Fire Department.

Surviving beside Mrs. Moran are three daughters, Mrs. Mary Miller of Woodstock, Va., Mrs. Edna Shine of Riverdale and Mrs. Charlotte Rogers of Greenbelt, Md.; two sons, John M. of Beltsville and Howard Earl of Riverdale; one brother, John M. Moran of Norfolk, Va.; 10 grandchildren and one great grandson.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 9 a. m. at Gasch's funeral home, Hyattsville. Mass will be offered 9:30 at St. Jerome's Church, Hyattsville. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Col. Bridget, Of Air Force, Dies at 50

Col. Bernard A. Bridget, 50, Deputy Air Inspector of the Air Force and a veteran of both World Wars, died Tuesday at Walter Reed General Hospital of a heart attack.

Col. Bridget

Funeral services will be held Friday at 9:30 a. m. in Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Colonel Bridget, who lived at 5029 North Carolyn Spring rd., Arlington, was a native of Washington and attended school in Georgetown. He enlisted in the Army in 1917 and was awarded the Croix de Guerre for rescuing wounded under fire in France.

After the war, the colonel became an air cadet. He got his commission in 1926 and served at air bases, including Randolph Field, Tex., and Williams Field, Ariz.

During World War II, Colonel Bridget served as chief of staff to the Second Marine aircraft wing in the Pacific, and participated in the Okinawa and other invasions.

He was assigned as Deputy Air Inspector here in June, 1948.

In addition to the Croix de Guerre he also holds the Legion of Merit with two gold stars, the Bronze Star and the Silver Star.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Lucretia M. Bridget; a son, Maj. Henry B. Bridget, Air Force, now stationed at Omaha, and two daughters, Mrs. R. J. Van Ness, Kerrville, Tex., and Mrs. Alfred Ashman, 3528 S. Wakefield st., Arlington.

Christian Barham

Kingsport, Tenn., Sept. 28 (AP).—Christian Barham, 63, of Milan, Tenn., a national authority on saddle horses, died in a Kingsport hotel early today.

He was en route to Norfolk, Va., where he had charge of the Oscar Smith Stables.

For years he had judged top horse shows throughout this country and Canada.

Woman's Club Moves Again For Tax Relief

The Woman's Club of Chevy Chase yesterday set in motion a second legal effort to obtain tax exemption for its club-house property at 7431 Connecticut ave.

Mrs. Kathry Lawlor, the club's attorney, contended in Montgomery County Appeal Tax Court that legislation passed by the Maryland Assembly last spring bore the "intent" to exempt the club's property. The act became effective June 1.

A suit for setting aside 1948-49 taxes is now pending before the Maryland Court of Appeals following an adverse ruling in Montgomery County Circuit Court last month. The present action seeks relief from 1949-50 taxes, amounting to $1500.

Leo Bender, chairman of the tax court, gave Mrs. Lawlor a week within which to file briefs supporting her contention that the legislative act was written specifically to provide relief to the club.

David Macdonald, county attorney, contended that the club does not qualify under the wording of the act as a club whose purposes "are of a charitable, benevolent and civic nature."

Another point of contention was whether the act, becoming effective June 1, obviated the necessity for filing an appeal before May 1, the final date for tax appeals in the county.

Moliere's "Imaginary Invalid" will be performed by the Barter Theater at 8 p. m. today at Washington-Lee High School, 4035 N. 13th st., Arlington. The Arlington Civic Federation is sponsoring the performance.

Tickets are on sale in Washington at the Willard Hotel, or may be obtained by phoning Mrs. William G. Watt at Chestnut 7032.

Falls Church Half-Day Plan Begins Friday

Half-day classes for 240 primary pupils in the Falls Church Madison-Jefferson School will open Friday because of overcrowding, City School Superintendent Irvin Schmitt said yesterday.

About 30 second-graders will be included in the half-day program, voted early this month by the School Board, Schmitt said.

The part-time sessions will be for all first-graders and for one combination first and second-grade class. Morning groups will attend school from 9 a. m. to 12:10 p. m., while afternoon students will arrive at 12:10 p. m. and stay until 3:20 p. m.

Schmitt said he hoped to pick the second-graders who will attend half-day classes from youngsters whose parents prefer to have them on a part-time schedule.

Four new teachers have been hired this month, three of them in the primary grades, in order to reduce the pupil load per teacher, Schmitt said.

Thomas P. Cullen

Funeral services for Thomas P. Cullen, 40, assistant production manager of The Washington Post who died Tuesday night after a year's illness, will be held Friday at 9 a. m. at his residence, 109 S. Aberdeen st., Arlington.

His body will remain at the W. E. Fitzgerald funeral home, Arlington, until 3 p. m. today, then to his home. Funeral services there will be followed by a requiem mass at St. Thomas More Church at 9:30 a. m. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Herbert Lockart

Saint Thomas, Virgin Islands, Sept. 28 (U.P.).—Herbert Lockart, leading Virgin Islands businessman, Swedish consul here and father-in-law of Gov. William Henry Hastie, died last night.

Five Candidates in Arlington Give Views From Platform

Five candidates for County and State offices in Arlington gave their views last night at a joint meeting of the Hall's Hill Civic Association and the Arlington chapter, Veterans Committee, at Mount Salvation Baptist Church.

I. Lee Potter, Republican candidate for the Virginia House of Delegates, called for abolition of the State Milk Commission, pointing out the commission was organized as an emergency measure in 1934 and "we have been stuck with it ever since."

Robert W. Cox, Independent candidate seeking election to the Arlington County Board, charged from the same platform that the County Board had failed to represent its citizens at recent State Milk Commission hearings in Alexandria.

Cox scored Democrat Basil DeLashmutt, his incumbent opponent for the County Board, for "laxity" in seeking improvement in the County's recreation facilities.

Delegate A. Maynard Magruder, Democrat running for reelection to the Assembly, charged the rural counties of Virginia "are not pulling their load in raising local revenues."

A member of Governor Tuck's Tax Study Commission, Magruder said the commission will recommend legislation calling for reallocation of funds to localities. This will "force the communities to live up to their obligations," he said.

Two incumbent and unopposed candidates for reelection to the Arlington School Board, Dr. Curtis E. Tuthill and Dr. E. R. Draheim, also spoke at the meeting.

Labor Group Indorses $3 Silver Certificate

Washington Central Labor Union, assembly of AFL locals in this area, yesterday indorsed a House bill authorizing issuance of a $3 silver certificate bearing the portrait of the late President Franklin Delano Roosevelt on one side, and the Roosevelt Library at Hyde Park on the other.

Churchmen Voice Appeal for Needy

San Francisco, Sept. 28. (AP)—Appeals for continuing efforts to help the underprivileged and homeless people of the world were made today at the Episcopalian convention.

The Rt. Rev. Norman Nash, Bishop of Massachusetts, urged an increase of means for training the clergy in social work.

He said the church must minister with renewed vigor for "St. Swithins in the slums and St. Georges by the gas house," meaning the work should be pushed for aid to the needy.

Bishop Nash was not the only prelate to make such a plea before the joint session of the House of Bishops and the House of Deputies at the fifty-sixth triennial General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States.

The Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, chairman of the World Council Committee of Service for Refugees, said that Greece, with nearly one million homeless persons out of an eight million population, was a "pitiful example" of the need for continued relief.

The Rev. Mr. Larned, whose headquarters is in Geneva, Switzerland, also mentioned homeless millions in western Europe, China, India and Palestine.

He said the church had done good work, pointing to the pledge of the last triennial convention to raise one million dollars a year for world relief. This pledge has been more than met, the Rev. Mr. Larned said, with $3,500,000 given up to last July 15.

Bishop Nash said the need for greater work for displaced persons is very great, adding that of 82,000 persons eligible to enter the United States under the Displaced Persons Act, the entire Protestant Church had promised assurances for only 7000.

The bishop said that to stimulate the program for resettlement the Episcopal Church is asked to secure 1200 sponsors for displaced persons between now and Christmas.

Melish Resolution Put Up

The "Melish Case" was moved a little farther onto the convention stage today with a resolution introduced in the House of Bishops.

The case arises from the dismissal of the Rev. John Howard Melish, 74, as rector of Holy Trinity Church in Brooklyn, N. Y. He was dismissed by Bishop James P. De Wolfe on vestrymen charges he had condoned certain activities of his son and associate rector, the Rev. W. H. Melish.

The complaint was against the younger Melish's activities with the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, which the department of Justice listed as subversive. State court action over the Melish ouster is still pending.

Today the House of Bishops received a resolution which, if approved, would restore the elder Melish to his post, which he had held for 45 years. The resolution was expected to go to a committee which also handles other matters and there was no public expression whether it would be acted upon.

Free Housing for Bishop

The resolution, introduced by the Right Rev. Lane W. Barton, Missionary Bishop of Eastern Oregon, would give the parishioners of Holy Trinity Church the final say on recommending removal of the rector, instead of the vestry.

Parishioners of the church already have voted 261 to 27 against the ouster of Dr. Melish and to dismiss, instead, the nine vestrymen who complained to the bishop about him.

The House of Bishops unanimously approved a proposal to provide the church's presiding bishop, the Right Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill, housing on the premises of Seabury Houses at Greenwich, Conn. Bishop Sherrill has been charged rent for the place.

Negro Heads Clergy Group In Virginia

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

Middleburg, Va., Sept. 28—The Loudoun County Ministerial Association has elected as its new president the first Negro ever to head the group.

Rev. A. M. Erwin

New president of the association, which represents nearly every Protestant denomination in the county, is the Rev. A. M. Erwin, 63, pastor of Middleburg's Asbury Methodist Church.

Son of a slave and a one-time railroad section hand, Mr. Erwin was elected unanimously.

According to the Rev. Louis C. Shearer, pastor of the Leesburg Methodist Church and former acting president, the association is a small group of clergymen who meet six times a year to talk over their problems.

It performs no public function and its members do not represent their churches officially.

Mr. Erwin, who came from North Carolina two years ago last May, is one of two Negro clergymen living in Loudoun County.

"I feel I'm with a group of Christian gentlemen and feel perfectly at home," he said today.

Born in Spartansburg County, S. C., where his father was a preacher, Mr. Erwin ran away at 12 to sign up for the Spanish-American War.

This desire soon faded, and he started a period of about 10 years working as water boy, section hand and foreman on railroad gangs. During this period, he remembers, he acquired a knack with cards and dice.

One night in 1907, he recalled, he heard a sermon on "What shall I do to be saved?" This "convicted and converted" him, and the next week he got a license to preach.

Twelve years later after a course at the Methodist School of Practical Methods at Bennett College, Greensboro, N. C., he was ordained.

The stocky-white-haired clergyman now lives at the end of a dirt road directly across from his 100-year-old church.

Interfaith Group Elects 3 Co-Chairmen

The Washington area Office of the National Conference of Christians and Jews yesterday elected George R. Ellis, Col. Benjamin Ourisman and Norris C. Bakke as co-chairman of the office.

At its annual meeting in the Willard Hotel, the organization also named Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle as secretary and Milton W. King treasurer for the coming year. All were elected unanimously.

In the keynote speech of the meeting, Clarence A. Peters, director of the Northeastern Division of the NCCJ, said discrimination in the United States costs an estimated 15 to 30 million dollars a year.

He said the conference's 21-year-old campaign to eliminate "intergroup tensions wherever they exist," is essential to the establishment of world organization.

Dr. Leonard Aries, chairman of the educational planning committee, announced that the third annual series of seminars will be presented here later this year. This year's subject will be "Human Rights."

It was also announced that national NCCJ leaders will meet in the Mayflower Hotel November 11 to launch the Brotherhood Week campaign which will be headed this year by John L. Sullivan, former Secretary of the Navy.

Dancer Silent Under Quizzing About Hollywood

New York, Sept. 28 (U.P.)—Dancer Vicki Evans, soon to be a bride but never a "stool pigeon," was questioned for 30 minutes in the district attorney's office today about the Hollywood underworld.

"I didn't know anything to volunteer to them. I didn't know any of the people they asked me about," she said.

The "people," she said, included West Coast mobster Mickey Cohen, actors' agent Paul R. Behrman and Hollywood columnist Jimmy Tarentino.

She plans to be married soon to Matty Ryan, 30, of Detroit.

Joann Has Her Ups and Downs

The Washington Post

JOANN FALLON, 8, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Fallon, of 2504 10th st. ne., likes chocolate sodas, but not a self-operated elevator. She was en route for the former yesterday when the latter blew a fuse and trapped her between floors in her apartment house for 20 minutes. A janitor came to the rescue, released the lift's brakes and let Joann out on a lower floor. Joann shed many tears, meanwhile, but finally got the soda.

Woman Places Truman Ahead of Roosevelt

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 28 (Spl.). President Truman was praised here today as being "more progressive" than Franklin D. Roosevelt in naming women to important national offices.

The praise came from Mrs. India Edwards, executive director of the Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee, speaking here at a Harmony Dinner sponsored by the Washington County Democratic State Central Committee.

Mrs. Edwards praised the President as being willing to consider a woman to any post if her qualifications are presented to him.

Men Asked to Help

Representation of women on every Democratic State Central Committee in Western Maryland was urged by Mrs. Edwards and also Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, Maryland's National Committeewoman.

Mrs. Whitehurst said only seven out of Maryland's 23 counties have women on the State Central Committees. She urged the men present to correct that situation.

Mrs. Whitehurst also urged a committee of seven women be appointed in every congressional district, county and precinct to work with the men on registration, information, publicity, speakers, and organizational work.

Lane Defends Sales Tax

Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., spoke briefly in defense of Maryland's sales tax, and William C. Walsh, judge of the Allegany County Circuit Court, told the party leaders they should keep Lane in Annapolis for another term.

C. William Hetzer, chairman of the Washington County State Central Committee, was toastmaster. More than 300 persons from five counties were present, including 50 from Montgomery County.

Sen. Vandenberg In Fine Spirits

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 28 (AP)—Senator Vandenburg R., Mich.), was reported in "fine spirits" tonight at University of Michigan Hospital.

The 65-year-old Republican leader entered the hospital late Monday for a series of examinations.

Dr. John Alexander said the tests were "proceeding" and there were "no results to talk about" as yet.

Anticonvulsive Clinic Scheduled in Arlington

The annual Northern Virginia Anti-Convulsive Clinic will be held from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. today at the Arlington Health Department, 1800 N. Edison st., Arlington.

Dr. Randolph Leigh of the University of Virginia will conduct the special free diagnostic consultation service, which refers patients to their physicians for further treatment. Doctors are invited to visit the clinic, as well as refer patients for consultation.

Dollars for Britain Drive To Be Furthered Here by Hand-Made Apparel Show

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

Calling All Grandmothers. First, and as far as Washington is concerned, happy result of devaluation, will be a showing at the United Nations Club October 13 and 14 of articles sponsored by the British Women's Home Industries. "Articles" is a very dull word for the lovely things which will be displayed—children's knitted sweaters, exquisite smocked dresses, evening sweaters as well as more utilitarian numeros for Mama—the sweaters and such will not be on sale—they're samples—but orders to special measures will be taken with pre-Christmas delivery guaranteed.

The styling is simply wonderful—and much of it has been done by Lady Daphne Straight, who has made many trips to Paris, bringing back ideas and high fashions. All the knitting and stitching is done by miners' wives, who sew the most surprisingly fine seams. A copy of the only layette accepted by Princess Elizabeth for Prince Charlie will be on view. It's all white satin, though made by miners' wives in grimy industrial towns. Modeling all these samples will be children of the British Embassy staff. Mrs. George Oaks, whose husband ran a British-American publication called The Outlook, is staging the exhibition. Prices, thanks to devaluation, are very reasonable.

Most Superfluous Gift Heard of Lately. As parting shot some wag gave Perle Mesta a pair of striped pants—the kind gent diplomats traditionally are supposed to wear—but don't.

Nice Reading. The short, short story in current Collier's called "The Black Pearl." It's first effort of Enid Sims Snow to hit a national magazine. The author, aunt of Mrs. William Mann and Betty Beale, who scribbles for a local gazette, has been a long time ill but is now doing nicely.

From London. There's to be very special music when the Earl of Harewood, King George VI's nephew, marries composer Marion Stein—a cantata in five sections by Benjamin Britten to the anthem "Amo, Ergo Sum" or, "I Love, Therefore I Am." Wedding presents, which have been on display at St. James's Palace, include a number of oddities—a giant cocktail shaker called a "Thirst Extinguisher"—a barrel organ and a sort of mechanical piano which plays mauve decade tunes like "Daisy, Daisy, Give Me Your Answer True," when a penny is slotted. The Harewoods, incidentally, plan to travel Stateside next year. Lord Harewood has become adviser on English programs for the United States-organized National Arts Foundation.

Strolling Around Government Buildings. The Department of Agriculture's launching a new venture—setting up classes in lampshade making and upholstery—all for free. You can read the notice at Entrance 4.—Commerce Department's display of Japanese-made goods which were flown here in a special plane. They range from fans to thermos bottles—all are beautifully made and will give real competition to our industries.—Those interested in the culinary arts should call the YWCA—there's to be a course of Cordon Bleu cookery by a graduate of the famous French School. A series for beginners and one for more advanced skillet wielders.

Romance Department. Amusing that beguiling Tudi Simpson, fiancee of the Marquess of Milford Haven, first set foot in Europe late last spring. The happy result of so brief a visit should be a great booster to tourism and Britainwards dollar flow by the USA's decorative and unattached young females.

TITTLE pieces of fur are big news in fashion circles this season. Bits of the fluffy stuff are scattered all over costumes in the form of hats, collars, cuffs, muffs and even on the tops of shoes. But Hattie Carnegie has done the most with the least in her cunning fur necklace, pictured here. Made of mink tails, it is clasped at the throat with a bow of velvet. It's a novel companion for your tweeds and flannels this fall. Available at Garfinckel's

Makeup for Autumn

WITH FALL COSTUME color trends now established, it's time to attune your makeup to the new colors.

Two major color themes are apparent in this fall costume scheme. There is the "amethyst" group, offering brilliant variations of blue, gray, and mauve, and the "golden" group, fashionably and popularly featuring gold and brown, rust and green tones.

These are all sharply definite tints, and the materials on which they are presented frequently show a high metallic sheen.

For cosmetically toning the complexion for the smartest in fall grooming, it is necessary to replace summertan make-up tints with lighter face powder and cream lipstick makeup shades, in correct color harmony with your basic untanned complexion, and the color of your hair. And, to make very sure that your makeup presents a color highlight sufficiently brilliant to cope with the color competition probably being offered by your fall costumes, it can pay you in glamour to favor the new high fashion lipstick shades, in the glowing coral or pink ranges. If your costume fabrics offer a high sheen, you can provide a comparable degree of glint to the lipstick application with a touch of lip gloss.

After having achieved cosmetic color perfection for your fall face, don't overlook carrying on this grooming achievement to the neck, shoulders, and arms.

Choosing a Fur Coat

You are buying a new fur coat. You've shopped until you're dizzy, tried on at least a hundred, and have been sitting at home in a whirl of indecision. Here are some tips for you from fur designer Esther Dorothy:

1. Don't buy a collarless coat this year. Some sort of collar is smartest, most practical, and will be in fashion for the next five years. The collar should be adjustable, to button or tie up close around your throat or lie back across your shoulders.

2. Choose simple, straight sleeves with a cuff. The big billowing kind are going out.

3. Choose natural shoulders without padding, but with deep armholes. If you like widenend shoulders, you will have them in your dress or suit underneath. Extra coat pads make an unsmart "football" shoulder.

4. If you have only one fur coat, do not buy a fitted one. The full type, with a detachable belt, allows you to have both the slim and full silhouette. A fitted coat does not go well over suits.

5. If you drive a car, make sure your coat has a vent at the back, or is short enough to push up when you drive. Sitting on a fur coat is sure and rapid death to its silky pelts.

6. Pockets play a part in the design of most coats this year, and since they are a practical idea, they will continue to be smart for a long time. Have them placed low at the side, and choose them big and useful.

Woman Has Drifted in Sentimental Alliance With Her Married Employer for Many Years; Is It Too Late Now to Rehabilitate Herself?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have read occasional articles about "office wives" but never anything in their favor. Is there nothing?

When an employer makes one feel that she is the most important woman in the world, when he devotes more time to her than to his family, takes her to dinner when they're supposed to be working, buys her gifts, etc., she is very apt to let other men mean too little to her. That is, until it is too late. Oh, much too late.

What is there for the woman, when she knows there is no chance of marriage? Even though my employer might wish a divorce—but I honestly think he does not,—there would be no grounds, for his wife doesn't even nag, yet we are quite sure she knows that we aren't always working. She never enters the office and is just barely polite nowadays, whereas we were very friendly once.

She Longs for Man of Her Own

AS I HAVE my own apartment my family knows nothing of this, so I cannot go to them for advice. They think I simply don't care about men, when I would give the world to have one who really cared for me, and that I didn't have to share with someone else.

I am truly sorry that I let this develop and I suppose I should seek another place to work, but I know my employer would strongly object, as it would take a long time to train a replacement. Also I might not find such a remunerative job.

If this is real love, and Mack doesn't care for his wife any more, what should we do? Years have gone by and we have just drifted, but I can't take it much longer. Can you suggest any reading material that might get my thoughts into safer channels? S. C.

Such Friendships Waste the Spirit

DEAR S. C.: More than 300 years ago St. Francis de Sales, then Bishop of Geneva, wrote in his native French an "Introduction to a Devout Life,"—with the charitable intent of helping persons who live in the world (not in cloisters, convents or monasteries) find true contentment in wholesome godly behavior.

By happy chance a good translation of this profoundly wise, exquisitely sensitive and charming work of piety came to my attention some weeks ago; and as we say in the vernacular, its contents are as modern as the day after tomorrow. And it occurs to me that some of its chapters may give you light and strength for dealing with your special problem.

With compassionate good sense and delicacy of expression, yet also with great firmness of attitude, the author explores the very subject that worries you, namely, the problem of "dangerous friendship," as he calls it.

Advice, Remedies Proposed by Saint

IN CHAPTER 18 he writes, "When these foolish friendships are maintained between persons of different sexes, without pretentions to marriage, they are called fond love—," and after some pithy discussion he concludes, "They waste the spirit and ruin the reputation." And he warns there can be no compromise with such infamous bondage.

For example, in Chapter 21, dealing with advices and remedies against wrong friendships, he says: "An excellent remedy would be to withdraw yourself from the object (of wrong friendship). Change of place contributes very much to allay the pains of grief . . . But what must he do who cannot withdraw himself? Let him absolutely retrench all particular familiarity, all private conversation, amorous looks, smiles, and in general all sorts of communication and allurements——."

He adds, "I call upon everyone who has fallen into these wretched snares: cut them, break them, tear them . . . do not enter into any compromise with a love which is so contrary to the love of God . . . and doubt not but God will deliver you from those criminal passions provided you continue faithfully in good exercises." The Newman Press at Westminster, Md., offers a fine translation by Allan Ross, but other translations are also available, so take your choice. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Out of Season Delights

Many housewives confine their baking to the fruits of the season and a whole winter may pass with none of these nice berry recipes used. Canned pie cherries and different sorts of berries when drained of their juice may be used just as fresh summer berries and prove interesting winter changes. Frozen fruits may also be used to advantage.

Classes in Slimming

There are several ways to keep the figure trim—even with autumn weather luring back those hearty appetites.

And at the YWCA you can take your choice of slimming rituals. you may enroll in classes of swimming, calisthenics, tennis, badmington, modern dance, fencing, and many others. For further details call Miss Patricia Oliver, Metropolitan 2100.

Cooking Cue . . .

When cooking meat and root vegetables, do not continually thrust a fork into them to see if they are done sufficiently. Test them as little as possible as this only lets the juice out in both meat and vegetables and causes them to lose flavor.

Drapes, Curtains At Their Prettiest In 'Homes of '49'

Lucia Brown

DRAPE shapes are prettier than ever this year!

Not the zoot suit kind (after all, that jive stuff is long since passe) but the way they're making draperies.

Windows come in for a big share of attention now because they're bigger than ever before. We've discovered the picture window—and a wonderful discovery it is. But night must fall, and windows must be draped unless you want to live like a goldfish.

In the "Home of '49" you'll glean many new ideas about arranging the draperies and curtains in your own house. The exhibit of 22 model dwellings—eight furnished—will continue through October 2 under the sponsorship of The Washington Post, so you still have time to see them if you haven't already.

Covers Entire Wall

UNUSUAL drapery ideas are reflected in the windows of the Malbrook rambler in Fairfax County, decorated by Malcolm Scates, Inc. The upstairs bedrooms are particularly interesting. In the master bedroom, one entire wall is covered with draperies. When they're pulled together they cover window and all. These are in a modern floral pattern of chartreuse, green and gunmetal. The head of the beds is against this draped wall. (They're twin beds with a single headboard, covered in lovely gunmetal velvet.)

Two walls in this room are chartreuse and two gunmetal, and two kinds of drapery materials are used also! On the side opposite the heavily draped wall are small windows, each neatly draped in short chartreuse curtains with an unobtrusive gunmetal pattern.

The guest bedroom has distinctive cornices. They are made of bound reed and surmount draperies in an aqua and beige floral pattern. The ceiling in this room slants and the cornice slants right along with the ceiling, being wider on one side than on the other.

Far Eastern Motif

PAGODA-SHAPED valances are seen in the living room of the Greenwich Forest "Home of '49" in Bethesda. Corrado's, Inc., which decorated this Ornstein-built house, shaped the valances this way to further carry out the Far Eastern theme of the room. The material used is a colorful Chinese print with a green background.

Upstairs in the hall, another unusual window treatment is seen. Valance boards, covered with green leatherette, extend across the top of a small window and down each side. The window seat beneath has a green leatherette cushion.

Swag draperies, always pretty and graceful when well done, are used in the master bedroom of the Broyhill "Home of '49." These are in an unusually attractive color combination. The swag, which extends down each side for a few feet, is of yellow taffeta. Side draperies beneath are in yellow, green, and magenta floral print. Miller Furniture Co. of Arlington decorated this house, but the draperies are by Rufus Newberry.

Swiping His Cuff Links?

When your husband discovers you've swiped his best cuff links this winter, your defense can always be: "You wouldn't want me to be out of style, would you darling?"

Brigance of Charles Nudelman may be brewing trouble for American homes, but his latest style inspiration is a cuff that opens on top of the wrist and is held together by men's jeweled evening cuff links. The new cuffs form the key detail and decoration on evening blouses, worn with velvet dinner skirts, and on beautiful silk shirting blouses in pale creamy white for wear with midwinter suits and cruise skirts.

Parents Must Always Foster Child's Sense of Security

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

IT is commonplace to be told that a baby must have a sense of security. How does he get it and what imperils it?

In the baby's infancy the easiest way to establish his security is to nurse him. This ceremony which is a combination of warmth, of protectiveness and nourishment, develops a sense of security which is difficult to destroy.

As the child grows and comes into conflict with the parents over behavior, his sense of security becomes firmly rooted in his recognition of their unswerving affection for him.

A child does not know, always, what conduct will please these strange gods who rule over him. He may not be intent on mischief but discovers that he has been guilty of it. The parent who says, "How can I love you if you act this way?" or worse yet, says, "I can't love you if you are bad," is destroying the child's security and self-confidence.

HE CAN thrive only if he knows love is not built on so perilous a foundation as behavior. The child must know he is always loved, even if his behavior has to be punished severely.

The child must feel that his parents are secure. He senses it if a father fears for his position. He trembles lest a parent die and leave him. He shivers when parents quarrel.

So the child retains his sense of security when his parents exude confidence. They are the ones who discuss or meet death with courage and hopefulness; who show—even if they quarrel—that obviously they love each other, and who display confidence in their ability to be the child's economic protector.

In daily life it is well, unless this is impossible of achievement, not to subject the child to too many changes of residence, or put him under the protection of too many new and strange persons. The effort to adjust to many changes deprives the child of a feeling of security. He needs his home roots strongly entrenched.

If changes are necessary then they should be met by parental enthusiasm so that the child feels exhilarated and not frightened by them.

Yes, security is more than a word. It is a state of mind and a way of living which fill the child with the belief that his need for affection, for protection and sustenance can be amply met by loving, strong, confident parents.

Aid Asked in Drive to Employ Handicapped

By Genevieve Reynolds and Nicha Soure

WANTED—equal job opportunities for the physically handicapped. They are the last to be hired and the first to be fired, according to William P. McCahill, assistant to the chairman of the President's Committee on National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week. A Nation-wide campaign on NEPHW will start Sunday.

"Help get the physically handicapped out of shadowland," McCahill told members of the Washington Soroptimist Club yesterday at a luncheon meeting at the Willard Hotel.

He pointed out that an "empty sleeve doesn't mean an empty head." In the past five years, for example, rehabilitated physically handicapped persons have added about nine million dollars to the national income.

Eight Million Are Children

OF THE 28 MILLION handicapped persons in this country, eight million are children. Specifically there are 300,000 epileptic children, 500,000 with cardiac conditions and 3½ million with speech defects.

McCahill says that 100,000 jobs are needed for disabled veterans alone. And still another 10 per cent of the handicapped are looking for employment dispite the fact that 227,000 were placed in jobs in 1948.

The Seventy-ninth Congress enacted a law setting aside a National Employ the Handicapped Week. Enthusiasm for the project runs from the White House straight through Congress. Still, as McCahill sees the over-all picture, more public understanding is needed. Apathy, indifference and ignorance must be banished, to give the handicapped an even break.

Chicagoan Speaks

MISS GAY SWENIE, director for women personnel in the Armour Co. in Chicago, related how the Soroptimist Club in the Windy City aids the physically handicapped. That group has all the books printed in Braille used by the Hadley School for the Blind. These books given by the club are used by sightless persons across the Nation.

Miss Swenie was one of several out-of-town Sorops at the local club's luncheon. Miss Aline Alcraft, president, Leicester Soroptimist Club in England, brought greetings and thanked club members for the food and clothing parcels sent the English group after the war. Since arriving in this country six months ago she has visited 22 States. When she returns home Saturday, she will resume her post as headmistress of a private school.

Another visitor was Miss Bep Regeur of Kongens Lynby, Denmark, who has been studying on a United Nations' fellowship at the University of Chicago and the Lakeside Hospital in Cleveland, Ohio. She will depart next week for Copenhagen to take up social welfare administration.

Church Women's Council

"THY KINGDOM Come—Through Me" was the theme of the annual fall rally of the Washington Council of Church Women at an all-day meeting at National Presbyterian Church yesterday.

The United Council's program will be carried out in the local council through four phases.

1. The Christian Social Relations committee, composed of 1000 women will work voluntarily in Freedman's and Gallinger Hospitals and the Juvenile Court.

2. The Christian World Relations department will sponsor "World Community Day" on November 4 with a tea at the Polish Embassy.

3. The annual Missionary Institute will be held October 25-27 at First Congregational Church and will review and plan missionary activities, including a foreign mission study of Japan.

Yesterday's meeting was the fourth segment of the year's program, a leadership training course for local church women.

Beef, Lamb, Veal Still Short

Pork and Fowl in Plenty Is Cheery Fall Outlook

By Lucia Brown

CHICAGO, ILL., Sept. 29.—Plenty of pork.

That's what you'll be getting this fall—and at reasonable prices as here in Chicago, the city apostrophized as "Hog Butcher to the World" by Poet Carl Sandburg.

That's what we've been served here, at the annual newspaper food editors' conference. You should see the breakfast! They're the kind your great-granddaddy loved, mounds of juicy brown sausages . . . platters of broiled ham swimming in "red eye" gravy . . . long strips of crisp, striped bacon . . . dishes of fried apples . . . steaming stacks of hot cakes.

Largest Supply Since '43

SUCH GOOD things will be easy to come by as cold weather sets in, they keep telling us at meetings sponsored by big-time outfits such as Armour, Swift, Wilson. W. S. Shafer, vice president of Armour, says the pork supply will be the largest since 1943, the biggest peacetime supply in many decades. As buying advice to the homemaker, he says to remember that a "hog is more than a pork chop." Concentrate on the less highly touted cuts, and on smoked picnics, hams, pork butts and sausage for real bargains.

Peak of the pork will come later in the fall. Meantime Shafer points out, there was never a time in American history when more turkeys or chickens were available. There are at least 25 percent more by weight than in recent years.

Prospects for beefsteak and lamb or veal chops aren't quite so good, though. There'll be practically no more beef than last year. Probably a little less, Mr. Shafer says. The same goes for veal and lamb.

Deep-Bodied Roast Beef

WE HAD a wonderful taste of one of these scarcer articles at the Wilson luncheon at the Saddle and Sirloin Club, a dignified, paneled retreat in the midst of Chicago's noisy stockyards. The slices of roast beef were three-quarters of an inch thick, shading juicily from crisp brown edges to tender pink centers. Everett Wilson, president of the company, talked about light now, which the average weight of hogs coming to market is light now, which means there'll be plenty of compact little hams, roasts, and picnics, well suited for the small family.

Talking turkey was in order at the Swift breakfast, though the company introduced its new pre-cooked "Saidy," a smoked pork butt. Paul Goeser—whose hands you will see carving a turkey in a new movie short this fall—demonstrated his art on a huge roast bird brought in to the tune of "Turkey in the Straw."

"A sharp knife, peace of mind, and a turkey that's not overdone or over-garnished are what's needed for successful carvingoh said Mr. Goeser as he deftly flicked off a leg and cut a neat window in the gobblers side to remove the stuffing.

Dance, Skate, Skip Rope For Lovelier Legs

Tenth of a series of articles on teen-age slimming

By Ida Jean Kain

THE story of Cinderella and her tiny glass slippers started foot troubles for a lot of Eve's daughters. Luckily you teen-age girls can side-step all this and wrinkles, too. Never try to crowd your feet into short or narrow shoes and don't wear sloppy, run-over heels or cramp your foot style in any way.

IDA JEAN KAIN

Feet are bigger today . . . the better to carry you. and bear in mind that your feet will continue to grow until 21. Have both feet measured every time you buy a new pair of shoes, and allow for this growth in sock and stocking size. They should be a half-inch longer than your foot when you're standing. Always stand up and walk around a bit when purchasing new shoes—shoes should not require "breaking in." This does not mean you can't have pretty shoes . . . but buy them to fit your feet as well as your fancy.

By the way, the request for this advice comes from a 20-year-old girl. She noticed that many of the girls in her sorority have badly deformed toes, and is convinced that girls do not realize the troubles they are starting until it is too late. It's true that most foot troubles begin in teen-age years.

And don't overlook the fact that healthy, strong feet better your chances of having pretty legs. Perhaps you didn't inherit glamour gams from the limbs of the family tree . . . but no girl has to put up with flabby, fat legs or weak, skinny legs. If your legs are your worst feature, take up dancing lessons, ride a bicycle, skate, skip rope. Ask the gym teacher about special dancing classes. No doubt your local Y gives lessons.

With the right training, dancers have beautiful legs even though they may not have started out with perfect limbs. Interviewing dancers, I find more often than not they took up dancing to improve their legs and their general health . . . and some went on to become internationally famous. The secret of slimming down too-plump legs is to wear wool tights while taking special exercise and while engaging in sports, such as hiking or skating. The warmth of the wool plus the exercise makes for long, smooth muscles. Dancers wear them for all practice workouts.

The gals with skinny legs need to gain weight, and exercise for better muscle tone. It is possible to develop beautiful legs—so get busy.

Back to shoes—make sure to wear the right size shoes and stockings always, and avoid sloppy run-over heels. Then outside of painting your toenails bright red, you'll never have to give your feet a thought. Happy day.

Ask Anne About Repairing Carriage

I have just purchased a second hand folding baby carriage. It is in fine condition except for the hood. Where it folds the leather is cracked enough so you can almost see through it. Could you recommend something to put on it so, when we fold it, it won't crack more? D. O.

You could apply a thin coat of quick-drying enamel to the hood. Or, there is a plastic coating on the market which is for use on leatherette. To contact the store which sells the plastic coating, call District 1130.

Before either paint or the plastic coating is applied, all loose particles of leatherette at the crease should be brushed away.

Is it possible to remove compound tincture of benzoin from a white cotton nursing brassiere and a pink rayon silk dressing gown? T. D. G.

To remove tincture of benzoin from white cotton, soak the stain in a solution of 1 cup denatured alcohol to 2 cups water, then sponge or soak in a solution made of a few crystals of color remover in ½ cup water. Rinse twice. If stains remain, repeat. Color remover is sold where dyes are sold.

To remove stains from the pink rayon silk dressing gown use denatured alcohol. Do not use a stronger concentration than 1 cup alcohol with 2 cups water. Sponge the stained area and rinse thoroughly. The treatment may be repeated if improvement is seen and the alcohol solution does not affect the color.

I have made the mistake of using liquid shoe polish on my black suede shoes. Can you tell me how to get the shiny places off that were left on them? K. I. G.

Rub the shoes with a metal brush or rubber sponge made especially for bringing up the nap on suede. These can be purchased where shoe supplies are sold.

I am making a rug out of a "horse rein." Now that I have it sewed together it does not have enough body. Can you suggest what type of material could be used for the underside and where it could be purchased? L. M. C.

You could line the rug with burlap. It can be purchased in quite a few drapery departments of several Washington department stores.

I should like to have some draw curtains made for the windows in my living and dining rooms which are adjoining. There are three single windows and one group of three. Can these curtains be used alone or should they have venetian blinds or ordinary window shades to go with them? At night they will be drawn, in the day they will be open; but there are times when the sun comes in and when it seems to me there should be something to come half-way down. H. W. A.

Draw curtains are frequently used without blinds in rooms where the windows are shaded or are on the shady side of the house. If, however, the windows face the direct afternoon sun for part of each day, you will probably enjoy the rooms more if you have blinds which can be lowered when needed.

Catholic M.D.s Frown on Test Tube Babies

Rome, Sept. 28 (AP).—Delegates to the Fourth International Congress of Catholic Doctors today condemned the practice of having test tube babies as contrary to the natural rules of parenthood.

Prof. Octave Pasteau of Paris, said: "It would be frightful if one day we will have donors of human seed as popular as donors of blood."

If Catholic doctors do not take immediate and strong action against artificial insemination, he continued, "we will shortly have in all countries state services of seed donors as we have now services of blood donors."

Dr. Jeremiah Foley, of Ireland, said approval of artificial insemination would "prove a terrible weapon in the hands of modern totalitarian governments." He added: "We shall see the State taking in hand the breeding of subjects and the rearing of them without regard to divine law or human love."

He said that "artificial insemination deprives of personal foundation that most personal of all functions—parenthood."

Dr. Jesus C. Bacala of the Philippines attacked artificial insemination. Even when the donor is the husband of the artificially fertilized woman, Bacala said, the practice must usually be denounced as "perversion or pollution."

AF Chief Says Craft Have Beaten Sound by Far

New York, Sept. 28 (AP).—Air Force Secretary Symington disclosed tonight that "man has now flown and lived at speeds hundreds of miles an hour faster than the speed of sound"—which is 760 miles an hour at sea level.

The Air Force has admitted possession of a super-sonic plane, the X-1, but it has been consistently cagey about its exact top speed.

Whether Symington meant this plane or some other he did not specify. But in an address prepared for delivery to the National Security Industrial Association, he said:

"This same plane, if it had the range, would arrive in San Francisco before it left New York. That will give worry to the timetable experts."

The X-1 is understood to have reached a speed close to 1000 miles an hour for matters of seconds. Presumably Symington meant that if a plane had the power to sustain such speed for long distances, it would fly coast-to-coast in less than the three-hour time difference.

Morals Defendant Agrees to Undergo Brain Operation

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 28 (U.P.).—A delicate brain operation, which could result in death, will be performed Thursday or Friday on a 43-year-old World War II veteran in the hope of curing him of abnormal tendencies.

James E. Smoot requested he be allowed to undergo the operation where he appeared before Supreme Court Justice Leo J. Haggerty last week in connection with a morals case.

Today, Justice Haggerty suspended a 2½ to 5 years prison term, on condition the operation be performed.

Justice Haggerty said the Veterans Administration told him Dr. Carl J. Graf, neurosurgeon, will perform the operation, a prefrontal lobotomy.

Smoot told the court that he knew the operation might result in his death but said he "is willing to take the chance."

A married man, Smoot suffered a head injury in 1943 before he entered the Army.

Policeman Tells Of Making Bets At Liquor Store

A vice squad policeman testified yesterday before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board that he made numbers plays last March at the Embassy Liquor Store, 3125 Mount Pleasant st. nw.

Pvt. Lawrence E. Blackwell told the board he made numbers bets on March 8, 9, 10 and 11 with the store's proprietor, Jacob Rubin. As a result, Rubin was arrested March 11, he said, and charged with operating a lottery.

Read into the record was the fact that Rubin received a suspended sentence of one to three years and a $500 fine.

Rubin testified that he had taken the numbers plays as a favor to a friend who lived in the same building. However, he would not name the friend. The board took under advisement its decision on charges Rubin used the premises for gaming purposes.

Greek-Balkan Peace Talks Seen in U. N. Plan

Lake Success, Sept. 28 (AP).—A new round of Greek-Balkan peace talks seemed assured today when the Western Powers urged such a move and Russia's Andrei Y. Vishinsky said it deserved study.

The Soviet Foreign Minister told the U. N. political committee he supported a Polish proposal for a 24-hour delay in voting on a new conciliation plan put up by Australia.

A four-member conciliation committee would be headed by Assembly President Carlos P. Romulo and directed to report back to the committee by October 17.

Aid Debate to Be Opened

Lake Success, Sept. 28. (AP)—The Economic Committee of the United Nations Assembly set Thursday for start of general debate on a program of economic development of the world's retarded areas.

Barbiturates Dangerous With Alcohol

A warning that drugs in the barbituate family are "extremely dangerous" when taken in combination with liquor, was sounded last night by Dr. Ebbe Curtis Hoff, medical director of the new Virginia State Division of Alcohol Studies and Rehabilitation.

Dr. Hoff spoke before 300 persons at a meeting called to discuss treatment of alcoholics in northern Virginia. The meeting was sponsored by the State Health Department and the northern Virginia committee for Education on Alcoholism at the Alexandria USO building.

Dr. Hoff cautioned there have been cases where patients have died through a combination of alsohol and barbituates such as nembutal, amytal and secconal. He warned also that alcohol combined with large doses of patent medicines containing bromides also can be fatal.

Truman Praises Army, AMG for Work in Germany

President Truman yesterday congratulated the Army for resisting the Soviet blockade of Berlin "fearlessly and successfully" and for "restoring and preserving" peace in Germany.

He also hailed the Army's "military gover. ent" of Germany, saying it had saved millions of Germans from starvation in "perhaps the greatest single mass relief task in history."

It also has given the German people "the strength and will to win for themselves a place in the family of free democratic nations," he said.

The President's statement was made in a letter to Defense Secretary Louis Johnson in which he asked that his thanks and those of the Nation be conveyed to all military and civilian personnel who participated in the Army's military government in Germany.

The State Department took over German occupation duties from the Army last Wednesday. John J. McCloy, who had served as military governor since July 2, became U. S. high commissioner.

Package Stores Association Picks Treger for Office

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 28 (Spl.)—Ely J. Treger, proprietor of the District Line Liquor store at 405 61st st. ne., Washington, D. C., was elected vice president of the National Retail Liquor Package Stores Association here today.

The convention, which closed today, elected Benjamin Joseph of Worcester, Mass., to succeed Joseph Scharfenstein of New Orleans, La., as president.

Delegates approved resolutions calling for repeal of the special Federal excise tax of $3 a gallon on liquor and for passage of fair trades laws in all States.

A-Bomb Control Move Blocked in Commons

London, Sept. 28 (NYHT)—Nearly forty members of the House of Commons, including three representatives of the Labor Party national executive, tonight put a down a motion in the House urging Prime Minister Attlee to call a conference of the "heads of state" concerning the control of the atom bomb.

Prime Minister Attlee yesterday rejected a similar suggestion by A. R. Blackburn, Labor, author of today's motion.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW York—I remember the night:

When Jack Benny, staying at the Waldorf, said: "This place is so ritzy, a man must be shaved before they'll let him into the barbershop" . . . When Irving Berlin met Arnold Schonberg, and told the distinguished composer: "I've heard a lot about you, from Oscar Levant," and Schonberg replied: "And from no other source?" . . . And when the late Soviet Ambassador Constantin Oumansky complained at the Graphic Arts Club in N. Y.: "This great, powerful country, and yet no airconditioning in this building." A club member asked him: "Do all Russian buildings have airconditioning?" and Oumansky said: "No, but we had one in the Soviet Building at the World's Fair."

When Ben Bernie met Henry Fonda, who had played "Young Abe Lincoln," and Walter Huston and Raymond Massey, who had played Lincoln—all three films lost money—and told the trio: "Nice guy, Lincoln, but there's no money in him" . . . When Alexander Woollcott protested against Clifton Webb playing "The Man Who Came to Dinner," because he considered Webb too fragile, and Helen Broderick roared: "Remember, Alec, you're no Bull Montana" . . . And Albert Bein finally persuaded Harry Carey to play in his "Heavenly Express," by weeping: "When I was a boy, I got many a black eye for arguing that you were better than William S. Hart."

When Ernest Simpson, whose wife had divorced him to marry the Duke of Windsor, was being photographed by Jerome Zerbe at the Horse Show, and refused to pose pointing at a horse, and protested: "I never point" . . . When Orson Welles, at the dress rehearsal of his modern-dress Caesar, told the firemen assigned to the theater that they'd have to sit onstage, with the cast, because the show had no scenery, and no entrance-wings . . . When Bruno Frank donned dark glasses before leaving for Hollywood, and said: "I want Hollywood to dawn on me softly" . . . And Irving Brecher saw Gottfried Reinhardt dining with his father, Max Reinhardt, and said: "Gottfried eats meat-balls the way I eat cherries."

SUSIE Q.

"Excuse me, Susie . . . lady in distress!"

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

'Just Like Aunt Mabel'

Have you ever heard a mother say of her young daughter, "She looks and acts just like Aunt Mabel?" Or perhaps it was a grandparent to whom the child was compared.

"Of course," you may say, "but what of it? Everyone knows that children may often be like members of the family. It's interesting, but is it important?"

Difficult as it may be to realize, many a child has had a hard row to hoe because he was unfortunate enough to remind a parent of mother or father, uncle or aunt, brother or sister, with whom that parent had never gotten along well.

We like to think we are reasonable creatures—individuals who would not let emotion get in the way of our intelligent behavior. Recognizing intellectually that a child is not responsible for his appearance, we may feel that we can keep from responding to him as we once did to the person whom he resembles. But to do such is most difficult. In moments of stress we are likely to feel old irritations arising—ones that stem out of our unpleasant relationships with the person the youngster resembles.

To recognize and accept the possibility that such a thing may happen is the first positive step in avoiding prejudice. If we deny the possibility of it, then we are likely to seek for justifications in the present of our feelings and blame the child for things that would not bother us in another youngster.

WCBM Asks High Court Not To Rule on Gag

Baltimore, Sept. 28 (AP).—Radio Station WCBM today asked the Supreme Court of the United States to refuse a request that it consider the validity of Baltimore's unusual gag on crime news.

An important section of the local court rule already has been struck down by the Maryland Court of Appeals.

The State has asked the Suprme Court to intervene. It argues that a constitutional question is involved: Does freedom of speech and freedom of the press transcend the guarantee that an accused shall have an impartial trial?

WCBM and Stations WFBR and WITH were convicted of contempt several months ago for violating the court rule in news they broadcast about a murder case last July.

The rule prohibits, among other things, publication of the fact that an accused has a previous criminal record or that he has confessed.

WCBM's petition to the Nation's highest court said Maryland is taking its appeal on frivolous grounds.

"There is no statute of the State of Maryland involved," WCBM said.

"Only a local rule of the supreme bench of Baltimore has been attacked and found invalid as a violation of freedom of the press."

WCBM said there is a no evidence that its broadcasts hampered an administration of justice.

WASHBOARD AND THIMBLE RHYTHM

When we think of a washboard we usually see in our imagination someone bending over a tub of hot suds scrubbing and scrubbing to get the clothes clean. Here, though, is a way that a washboard can be used to strum a rhythm for your favorite song. We all sing better if we are accompanied by a musical instrument or another person. This simple rhythm-maker is a good instrument to include in your next rhythm band.

To make the washboard handy to hold, bore holes in the legs and tie a short length of clothesline rope across so that it can be hung around your neck. With the board swung on your chest, your hands are free to produce the accompaniment to your song.

To make a louder tone place thimbles on your fingertips and rub them across the rough scrubbing section of the board. Sing out old familiar tunes such as "My Old Kentucky Home," "Way Down Upon the Suwanee River," and "Home Sweet Home," and it will be a treat to beat your feet and play on the old wash board.

Tomorrow — Thread Pretty Feathers on a String.

PARTNERS

Q. X and Y were partners for many years in a small store. X and his wife were estranged, the wife living in another city. When X died, his wife claimed his share in the business, pointing out that X had left no will. When Y refused to pay her, although acknowledging that part of the assets of the business belonged to X, the widow sued. Is she entitled to collect?

A. The proper procedure would be for the widow to petition the court for appointment of an administrator of her husband's estate. She would be preferred as the administratrix, and would doubtless be appointed. Then the surviving partner could pay to her as administrattrix the dead partner's share of the assets of the partnership, which automatically ended with the death of X. The surviving partner rightly refused to pay anything to the widow pending appointment as administratrix, and her suit would be dismissed—F. L. D.

My Friends by Mail

I form my friendships through my work . . . At home or on the street . . . On plane and train and trolley and . . . Wherever people meet . . . In elevators and upon . . . The benches at the zoo . . . At private parties and in stores . . . Along the avenue . . . And then there are the friends I find . . . But whom I never see . . . For they are only in the mail . . . The postman brings to me . . . And yet I know them just as well . . . As if I met them here . . . Because they tell me all their thoughts . . . And they are so sincere . . . And they are just as welcome to . . . And just as much a part . . . Of every dream where others seem . . . To captivate my heart.

BARNABY

Well, son, are you enjoying the television?
It's swell, Pop! I can hardly wait—
Huh? Wait? For what?
To see Mr. O'Malley. He hasn't been around here since Paddy's Bar and Grill put in a television set. . .
You mean you don't see him anymore? He's GONE AWAY?
Yes. But he'll come back now. When he hears WE have a television set—
As I recall, you bought the thing to get Barnaby's mind OFF his Fairy Godfather—

Next They'll Be Arriving On Roller Skates

J. Warner Mills 3d of 1606 Abingdon dr., Alexandria, Va., reports that one couple who attended the Lowe Drive-In Theater (south of Alexandria) the other night watched the show from a motor scooter.

BEST FOOT FORWARD

When the umpire ruled that Pesky hadn't crossed the plate before the third out was made during the early innings of Tuesday night's game, Boston Manager Joe McCarthy came storming out of the dugout.

As the photographers' flash bulbs popped, Marse Joe and the umps engaged in a brief but furious jawing session.

I murmured, "The boys ought to get some good pictures out of that argument. It looks like McCarthy is burning up."

"Aw, he ain't really sore," yawned one of my sophisticated colleagues. "Didn't you notice the way he turned his full face into the cameras the minute he saw the photographers?"

ROUND TRIP RATES?

Fred Proulx, jr., of 200 N. Piedmont st., Arlington, Va., suggests that the British had an alternative to devaluing the pound.

"They should have balanced their dollar budget by charging a small fee to everybody who swims the channel."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Housebroken, playful, lovable 2-month-old black male kitten." (Union 1927.)

"Two male 3-month-old puppies; they're eating me out of house and home." (Tuckerman 3683.)

"Housebroken, well-trained Great Dane; excellent companion and watchdog." (Shepherd 0958.)

"Four healthy, pretty baby kittens that wandered in the other night, wet, cold and hungry. Will deliver." (Shepherd 1595.)

"Two red male tabbies, 7 weeks old and too cute for words." (Hobart 5023, evenings.)

VAGRANT THOUGHT

PLAMPIN DOCTRINE FOR HANDLING RED MENACE

William Plampin of 4108 Tunlaw ter. nw. comes up with a constructive suggestion regarding the problem of lipstick on restaurant glasses.

"They should have a special rack of glasses to be used only by women who wear lipstick. The men would get clean glasses; the ladies would just get their own smears back."

AW, GO AHEAD AND SAY IT

Clara Cassidy of 1816 Belmont rd. nw. confides that this is the time of the year when she's moved to write a poem about ginkgo trees, but she can think of only one appropriate word that rhymes.

SUGGESTION BOX

Why doesn't the telephone company forget about this proposed rate increase, and get its extra millions by charging another nickel for pay station calls that run over five minutes?

TWIN BILL

Blanche Berlin of 812 Randolph st. nw. wonders whether we noticed that the double feature at the Pix recently was:

"The Imperfect Lady," "My Favorite Brunette."

The fellow who booked that bill must be a gentleman who prefers blondes.

GOOD NEIGHBOR GOODMAN

S. Oliver Goodman, our business editor, has his desk hard by our sports department. In the mornings, when the sports desks are deserted, Ollie does a brisk business handling athletically minded callers.

Yesterday, for example, a fellow came in looking for Povich. "I've got a story for him," he explained.

Ollie looked receptive, so our visitor continued:

"There's this sports writer, see. Works for a local paper. He's hustling out to the stadium to cover the ball game. But a speed cop flags him down, and starts to write out a ticket. While he's writing, the cop says: 'What's the hurry?' and the fellow explains: 'I'm a sports writer. I gotta get out there and cover the Nats.'

"The cop puts away his ticket book and waves the guy on. He says: 'Buddy, if you gotta cover the Nats, that's punishment enough.'"

Memo to Povich: It was too good a story. I couldn't resist stealing it.

Listen to the District Line on the air Monday through Friday at 1:30 p. m., over WRC.

50 YEARS OF KNOW HOW

KEEP YOUR EYE ON THE BALL

Whether you're watching the game from the fifty yard line or at home, you've got to keep your eye on the ball. It's pretty difficult—if your eyes are in bad shape. The players blur and the ball becomes invisible—you can't tell who you're cheering for! Clear this muddled vision by visiting our optical department. Our competent staff will prescribe properly fitted glasses for you.

Steel Pension War Watched By Millions

By Drew Pearson

The battle over old-age pensions in the steel industry is being watched by several million people not only in other industries but especially in southern California and Florida where Dr. Townsend's old-age pension movement and the ham-and-eggers have been so s' g.

Murray

Regardless of how the steel dispute comes out, more and more demands for old-age pensions will follow.

One little-realized fact in the steel dispute is that, during the President's fact-finding board hearings, CIO Chief Phil Murray appealed to the steel industry to settle the old-age pension issue by supporting the social security bill now before Congress. He said:

"Look here, you fellows, there's a bill before Congress right now calling for increased old-age pensions for everyone. Will you join me in supporting it?"

Murray's remark was addressed to Enders Voorhees and John Stephens, executives of U. S. Steel; to C. M. White of Republic Steel, A. B. Homer of Bethlehem, Ben Moreell of Jones-Laughlin and several others. However, he got no response. None offered to support the congressional bill for old-age pensions.

Murray's inference was that if Congress had handled the pension matter for everyone, his union would not need to threaten a strike. As it is, however, the unions with sufficient strike power, such as the coal miners, auto workers, steel workers et al, can get pensions. But unskilled labor, farm labor, white-collar workers and oldsters who never belonged to unions will get second-rate pensions—or none.

Trygve Lie's English

Friends of U. N. Secretary General Trygve Lie explain privately why the jovial diplomat doesn't like to make public utterances in English. He is fearful of a faux pas. For example, one day, in a conference with his U. N. staff, Lie was discussing the proposal to build a prayer room in the new U. N. headquarters. Some had suggested it be called a temple of prayer.

"No," said Lie, "that sounds too formidable. Let's just call it a rest room."

That Election Again

Charming Dave Bazelon, Assistant Attorney General in charge of alien property, dropped in to see Paul Douglas, the hard-hitting Senator from Illinois, to get his help in being made a judge on the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

As Bazelon sat down he noticed on the Senator's desk a clipping from a Chicago newspaper telling how Bazelon had contributed $200 to the campaign of GOP Senator Curley Brooks, whom Douglas defeated.

"Perhaps that's not a very good introduction," remarked the red-faced Bazelon, referring to the clipping.

"I don't keep political books," replied the good-natured Douglas.

Diplomatic Dynamite

Judge T. Alan Goldsborough, who wasn't afraid to fine John L. Lewis, signed a little-noticed order last week which is diplomatic dynamite. He cast serious doubt on the State Department's right to enter into agreements with other governments without ratification by the Senate.

Ruling that the Canadian-American air agreement may be illegal, Judge Goldsborough required the executive departments to define where the President's power of executing agreements ends and the Senate's right to ratify treaties begins.

Forty-nine Senators have protested the Canadian agreement on air routes as a State Department invasion of the Senate's ratification powers. Meanwhile Canada has put the State Department on the spot by threatening to throw out every United States line from Gander Airport in Newfoundland on Friday. Gander is the most important base on the transatlantic hop, and the constitutional issue raised by Judge Goldsborough is probably the most important since the Dred Scott decision.
